

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

P R E F A C E .

The history of our Fraternity has been one of development. This volume will show, what has perhaps never been fully realized, that there is a history of the Fraternity apart from the history of its individual members. This is owing to the fact that there is a spirit or soul in the Fraternity. If it were not so the following pages would record merely disconnected actions and events, instead of the steady growth and development of the principles which caused the birth of the Fraternity.

The Delta Upsilon Fraternity owes its origin to those feelings of fellowship and desire for intellectual growth which have always united college students into societies. But what bound her members still closer together was the fact that they were united in a desire to avoid the errors of secret fraternities.

At Williams, Union, Hamilton, and Amherst such societies sprung into existence. But, before these societies were united in any outward form, they were one in reality. The unity of spirit came first, and afterwards the unity of government.

There have been three stages in this growth: 1847, when four societies, which were one in spirit, formed the Anti-Secret Confederation; 1864, when the Fraternity Constitution and name were finally adopted; and 1879, when the Executive Council was instituted. This unity of spirit, which the outward growth indicates, is something of which we are justly proud. It is something which other Fraternities cannot so fully realize, for the reason that they have not the moral principle of non-secrecy, to strengthen their unity. We have ever an incentive in the hope of perfecting our formal government, and making it correspond to the real unity of Delta Upsilon life. The publication of the first quinquennial catalogue is a step in this direction.

The catalogues of the Fraternity published in 1839, 1847, 1852, 1858, 1864, 1867, 1870, 1874, 1877, and 1880, have not been equal to what the present interests of the Fraternity demand, and hence the difficulties which have attended the preparation of this catalogue. The addresses given in the early catalogues had in many cases been handed down without change from one catalogue to another, and all traces of many of the members had been lost. The middle name was only indicated by initial, and very seldom was any information given about the occupation of its members. It has been the aim of the editor to have these defects remedied. But we have found it impossible in the time allotted to do the whole work as we would have liked, and we have had to content ourselves with leaving the work in such a shape that it can in future years be more easily carried on to completion. The catalogue contains many errors of omission and commission. We can only say that the difficulties have been great, and we have done all that our opportunities and powers enabled us. In such a spirit we ask you to examine our work.

At the convention with the Brown Chapter, in 1881, an amendment to the Constitution was adopted, which required that a catalogue, with fuller information than previous catalogues had given, be published at intervals of five years.

The Convention, with Michigan Chapter, in October, 1882, elected the editor-in-chief, and appointed an Advisory Committee to have charge of the finances and a general oversight of the work. In February, 1883, the respective Chapters were requested to appoint a member to write a historical sketch of the Chapter, and also an associate editor to take charge of and be responsible for collecting the biographical information about the members of his Chapter, and of preparing the manuscript for printing. Blank forms for subscriptions and for biographical information, which were furnished by the editor-in-chief, were soon forwarded by the associate editors to the last known address of every member of the Fraternity. The large number of members who promptly subscribed for the catalogue was a great encouragement in the work. But the labor of ascertaining the residences of those members whose addresses were not correctly given in the catalogue of 1880 was very great, and involved a vast amount of labor in sending circulars and writing letters to friends and classmates of the missing members. There have been sent out over twelve thousand blank forms, circulars, postals, and letters. The blanks which were returned by the members have been preserved at each Chapter for future reference. They contain much more information than is found in this book, such as date of birth, names of parents, date of marriage, etc.

The purpose has been to give with each name, besides the address, the important biographical items in order of time, beginning with information about his Fraternity and college life, then giving the various occupations after graduation, offices of honor and trust, and information as to service in the civil war; ending with a list of published works, degrees received, and date of death, with the place also, if different from the address given after the name.

Three signs only have been placed before the name: the asterisk (*) for deceased members; the dagger (†) for those who on account of death, or any other reason, are not graduates of the college under which their name is given. If the person graduated elsewhere it is mentioned in the fine print under the name. All persons who have not the dagger before their names have received A.B. or some equivalent degree. In the classes of 1885-88, however, the dagger is not used except to indicate that the member is not now in college. The parallel (||) is used to indicate that at the time that part of the book went to press the address given had not been verified. In such cases more accurate information may perhaps be found by consulting the Appendix. The attention of the members of the Fraternity is particularly called to the names which have this sign before them, in hope that whenever the whereabouts of any such member is known it will immediately be forwarded to the Chapter of which he is a member, or to the office of the Executive Council, 83 Cedar street, New York City.

Rev. and M.D. have been used to denote members of the ministerial and medical professions, and Hon. to denote that positions of honor and trust have been held in public service of the government. In the Residence Directory the lawyers have been indicated by the word Law.

The aim has been to give the middle name in full. Where the letter has been found to stand for nothing, and where it is in reality a name in itself, no period has been used. The frequency with which this has been found to occur makes it probable that in many cases where the letter in this catalogue is pointed as an initial it is really a letter taken by the person himself to fill out his name, but which represents no special word or name.

Further information as to the date of the establishment of different Chapters has led to changes from the order given in previous catalogues. The date of a Chapter's organization as a non-secret society we have regarded as the true date of its establishment, rather than that of its formal admission into the Fraternity. The dates of the first Conventions, as given on pages 39 and 85, are, as far as we can ascertain, correct; but the letter quoted on page 100, which is dated July 22, 1847, shows that there was, at least, one Anti-secret Convention, which was held earlier, though it may not be regarded as a Convention of our Fraternity.

The membership roll of each Chapter has been carefully revised, and we believe, where omissions from previous lists occur, that it is with intention. A few of the additional names which are given in the Appendix were received too late for insertion in the Residence Directory and Alphabetical Index, though they are included in the general summaries of membership and occupations.

The list of collaborators will show the names of some of those who have contributed to the labor of collecting and putting in shape the materials of this book. But there are others, whose names are too numerous to mention, who have greatly helped the progress of the work. Each member of the Advisory Committee has, in addition to his duties upon that committee, rendered especial service, each performing the duties of associate editor for one or more Chapters: E. M. Bassett, Amherst, '84, for the Amherst Chapter; J. A. Adair, Hamilton, '84, for the Hamilton Chapter; and A. W. Anthony, Brown, '83, for the Wesleyan, Bowdoin, and Trinity Chapters. J. A. Adair also compiled the Records of Early Conventions and wrote the Development of the Badge. F. M. Crossett, New York, '84, has gone carefully over the proof of almost the entire book, and his corrections and suggestions have been of the very greatest service. R. G. Morrow, Michigan, '83, has assisted in ascertaining the addresses of a number of those whose addresses were not known. R. S. Bickford, Harvard, '85, with assistance from V. C. Alderson, Harvard, '85, revised and corrected the Residence Directory and Alphabetical Index. H. W. Kegwin, Brown, '79, with great care has prepared the General Summary of Occupations. This table does not agree with the several summaries given at the end of each Chapter's matter, for the reason that it was found necessary to group the occupations differently, and also because, in the body of the book, where a person was a member of more than one Chapter his name was placed under each Chapter; but in making a general summary a member has been regarded only as belonging to the Chapter where he was admitted to the Fraternity. The general summary also includes among undergraduates the class of 1888, which is found in the Appendix.

Mr. Edward Marshall Grout, Secretary of the Executive Council of Delta Kappa Epsilon, kindly loaned us a copy of the earliest catalogue of our Fraternity of which we have any trace, that of the Social Fraternity of Williams College, published in 1844.

Prof. Wendell Lamoroux kindly permitted the use of the proofs of a new general catalogue of Union College, which he is editing. We wish to acknowledge our indebtedness to the catalogues of Alpha Delta Phi and Psi Upsilon, of Auburn, Andover, Newton, and Rochester Theological Seminaries; to the catalogues of the various colleges and of the various Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, to all of which we have constantly referred. We also desire to state that the progress and excellence of the work have been greatly increased by the efficiency of the foreman, proof-readers, and employés of Messrs. Rockwell & Churchill, our accommodating printers.

In our work we have borne in mind that we are a Fraternity whose principles are righteousness and openness. We have tried to hide nothing of our history. In the spirit of impartiality and truth we have attempted to edit these pages. Yet we do not claim to have succeeded in stifling our enthusiasm and admiration for the history of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, and we have ever hoped that this catalogue may assist the Fraternity in its work of enabling college students in the best possible way to develop the nobler parts of their nature. If this should be so, our work would indeed be rewarded.

THE LIFE OF DELTA Upsilon

It was when an editor of a prominent college newspaper invited me to review the life of the Delta Upsilon chapter at the University of California that I was reminded of the best articles I had ever read in any of the magazines of college life. The article was exceedingly good, and I had never seen it before.

A. GARFIELD, WILLIAMSON, N. C.

A WORLD OF REASONS FOR THE VIKINGS.

By J. ESTABLISH AND S. ROBERTSON.

THE explanation of the success of the Vikings in the North Atlantic is a puzzle to many of our modern historians. They are not only a people of great courage and enterprise, but also of great intelligence. They were the first to discover the continent of North America, and they were the first to establish a permanent settlement there. They were also the first to cross the Atlantic Ocean, and they were the first to reach the continent of North America. They were the first to discover the continent of North America, and they were the first to establish a permanent settlement there. They were also the first to cross the Atlantic Ocean, and they were the first to reach the continent of North America.

Observing the large number of successful enterprises in American education, one naturally asks, What is the powerful enemy they have managed to thwart? or what is the mysterious secret they have managed to keep? It must be something that strikes at the essence of college life, or these organizations would not be peculiar to colleges. The only legitimate objects that I know of in sending a boy to college are two: to help him learn something, and to take a man of him. He may learn a great deal without becoming

John A. ...

THE BIRTH OF DELTA UPSILON.

"I was while in college an active opponent of college secret societies. I believed firmly then, as now, that no sufficient reason has ever been given for breaking up the unity and friendship of college life, by maintaining secret societies, and that their influence is exceedingly unfavorable to the best interests of colleges."—JAMES A. GARFIELD, WILLIAMS, '56.

A WORD ABOUT SECRET FRATERNITIES.

By ROSSITER JOHNSON, ROCHESTER, '63.

THE existence of a secret organization composed of respectable persons would seem to imply the existence not only of a common enemy against whom they have found it necessary to combine, but also of an enemy so unfair that he cannot be met openly. Either this must be the case, or there must be a secret of high intrinsic value which it is necessary to guard jealously and preserve with care. Without the existence of one or the other of these conditions, a secret organization is a manifest absurdity, of which sane people would never be guilty.

Observing the large number of secret societies in American colleges, one naturally asks, Where is the baleful enemy they have combined to thwart? or what is the precious secret they have sworn to keep? It must be something that strikes at the essentials of college life, or these organizations would not be peculiar to colleges. The only legitimate objects that I know of in sending a boy to college are two: to have him learn something, and to make a man of him. He may learn a great deal without becoming a man, and he may become a man without learning a great deal; but it is to be hoped he will accomplish both. He is hardly more than matriculated when he is interviewed privately and solemnly, and informed of the subtle enemy lurking within those walls, whose cruel purpose is to prevent him from learning anything or making a man of himself. Of course, if he is wise, he at once unites with one of those devoted bands who have bound themselves together by blood-curdling oaths in a league against the common foe. Step into any recitation-room and compare the innocent faces of the young gentlemen who wear the Greek-letter badges with the sinister countenances of those who are not thus adorned, and you will see at once where the line of contention is drawn. Whether these dark-visaged students resort to oyster-suppers, billiards, and other deep conspiracies to draw their unsuspecting fellow-students away from the legitimate pursuits of college life, or whether they simply accomplish their object by brutally out-studying them, the result would be the same, were it not for the secret fraternities. Non-society men may burn as much midnight kerosene as they please; the faculty may mark them as high for recitations as they can find in their consciences to do; committees may stupidly award them prizes under the false impression that it is possible for them to deserve them: but when it comes to those honors which are conferred by ballot of the students, the secret societies can cast a solid vote for candidates who never take any prizes or exhibit a high standing, and thus the scales of justice are brought to a level again.

Seriously speaking, the objection to the secret fraternities is, that they bring into college many of the bad elements of politics, and none of the good ones. By arbitrary action they place honors where they do not belong; by almost unavoidable combinations they make it possible for a few to thwart the desires of the many; by what has all the appearance and effect of absolutism, whether meant to be such or not, they work injustice and cause heart-burnings in that little four years' life which ought to be almost an Arcadia. When I was in college, bossism and the spoils system, made possible by secret fraternities, were as rampant on a small scale among a hundred and fifty students as they ever were in the municipal government of New York.

It has been said that the fraternities give rise to individual friendships that are very intimate, beneficial, and lasting. It seems to me that they prevent more such friendships than they create. If these organizations did not exist, all college boys who were congenial to one another would naturally gravitate together at some time before the completion of the course. As it is, they are "rushed" into the societies before they have had a chance to make acquaintance, and in how many instances those who would have formed a lasting friendship find themselves separated by society lines, we of course can never tell. I have yet to hear of any good thing made possible by secret fraternities, which is not equally possible without them.

I do not believe any person of good sense would unite with such an organization if he could be brought fairly to comprehend one consideration: that it is impossible to do so without stultifying himself. From the very nature of the case, one cannot be told the secrets of a secret society till he has at least promised to join it, and thus virtually joined it. He must, therefore, enter into an obligation without knowing what that obligation will require of him! He must swear fealty to something before he can be told what it is that he is swearing fealty to! And, when he is asked to do this for no object that cannot be as well attained without such stultification, he surely will make but one answer. The young man will find no better point of time for putting away childish things than the day he enters college; and nothing can be more puerile than an observance of the forms of secrecy when there is nothing to be secret about.

THE SOCIAL FRATERNITY.

BY THE HON. WILLIAM BROSS, WILLIAMS, '38.

The Social Fraternity was organized in Williams College in the fall of 1834. It was composed of ten members from each of the three lower classes,— all of them earnest, hard-working men, who had come to the college, not to have a good time, but to prepare for the active duties of life. For several years previous to that the two societies then existent in the college,— the Kappa Alpha and the Sigma Phi,— had monopolized the influence and the offices in the college and in the literary societies, and, conscious of their power, had become overbearing, not to say oppressive and tyrannical. This had been so keenly felt by the two middle classes that in 1834 they organized a revolt, and they so thoroughly impressed their views upon the freshman class that the society secured ten of the best men in it. They furnished ten men of like character from the sophomore and junior classes, at the organization of the society. They needed all the grit and the grace their self-respect could command, for never before in Williams College did thirty students have to endure more contempt and ridicule, more biting scorn than these thirty members of the Social Fraternity. “ Who can answer a sneer ? ” was long ago said of Gibbon’s treatment of Christianity, and of course they bore with all patience the mocking devices worn as badges by their rivals, and the slanderous slurs and the false innuendoes hurled at them on the streets and in the societies, and, knowing the honesty of their intentions, they pursued the even tenor of their ways with becoming dignity and propriety. In the recitation-rooms, and in the societies they did their whole duty as best they could in the full belief that hard work and sterling integrity in the end would win. It did ; for, before the close of the year, the society held the balance of power, and in 1835–6, and thereafter, for years at least, they controlled what may be called the politics of the college, so far as a proper regard for the best interests of the institution seemed to dictate.

The Social Fraternity, as might be inferred from its name, was organized for social purposes, to be sure; but also, and mainly, as a literary society. The compositions, the orations, and the debates at its meetings, and elsewhere, always called out the most carefully prepared and the best efforts of the members; and, having no secret organization, it was free from demoralizing cliques, whose only aim was by all means, fair or otherwise, to grasp the power and the honors of the college. The best men were by common consent put forward, for in that alone success could and should be achieved. In this way the tumult and the scorn manifested at the advent of the Fraternity was gradually changed to respect, and before the second year of its existence had passed away it commanded the confidence and the esteem of its rivals, and in fact numbered about as many members as both of them. Why it ever died out in the college of its birth is a question that perhaps the present generation of students can answer; but to the older graduates the fact is passing strange. So long as there are wrongs to set right, and college students to be stimulated and prepared for the higher and nobler duties of life, it ought to have in Williams, and perhaps in all other institutions of learning, a permanent and a vigorous existence.

THE EQUITABLE UNION.

The following extract from a letter of Prof. David Thayer, M.D., Union College, class of 1840, tells of the spirit which led to the origin of the Union Chapter in 1838:—

“Yours of recent date is received, and it reminds me that I promised to write you some of my recollections regarding secret societies as they existed in Union College nearly half a century ago.

“So long time has elapsed, and so little have I thought of such matters, that my memory of them is nearly lost. The secret societies had each a golden badge, bearing two Greek letters, as $\Delta \Phi$, $\Psi \Upsilon$, $K \Lambda$, etc. The $H B \Pi$ (eat a bit of pie) society was a burlesque, and an extemporaneous organization, gotten up for the amusement of a few at the expense of one, usually a young Solon, whose self-conceit had been hypercultivated by his loving mamma and the admiring damsels of his native village.

“The ceremonial was usually conducted in the most solemn and grandiloquent fashion from the ‘Nunc introduce novitium’ to the ‘dignissimum judicaverunt.’ The novitiate was duly invested with a paltry badge, which he was permitted to wear in the class the following day only, ‘as many good and worthy men had done before him.’

“At the conclusion of these solemn exercises the new member was courteously informed by the presiding officer that, in accordance with ancient usage, he was permitted to invite the members of the venerable $H B \Pi$ society to a hot supper.

“The tail of this phenomenon was larger than the head, and did not appear till the next morning, when the new member entered the lecture-room ‘with all his blushing honors thick upon him.’

“The influence of the other secret societies contributed largely to the cultivation of the spirit of clan and caste, so much so that, to illustrate: a $\Delta \Phi$ would not aid any movement proposed by a $K \Lambda$, or any member of any other society, unless he thought his society would favor it, and vice versa. These societies caused unnatural distinctions, and sometimes prevented homogeneous alliances and affiliations which freer and more spontaneous conditions would have favored.

“The character of each secret society was pretty distinctly defined. One society was composed chiefly of the convivial; another of well-dressed and handsome men; another included chiefly the men of good morals; and another those of good manners, etc.

“While I was in college the anti-secret society was formed under the name of the ‘Equitable Union.’ This organization was deemed a necessity in order to resist successfully the usurpations of the secret societies, which had become influential in college politics, and to rebuke the self-conceit of some of their members. The Equitable Union included among its members most of those students of the college who, from principle or for other reason, did not belong to any one of the secret societies. Consequently its membership was large, and its influence was great. In the midst of its prosperity an incident occurred which caused for the time much excitement. One young gentleman of the freshman class, and a member of the E. U., was persuaded to turn traitor to this new organization, and he joined a secret society. The day he appeared with his new badge was memorable. The night following, active measures were taken to resent the indignity, and on the following morning was seen suspended by the neck from the belfry of West College the effigy of the traitor, and on his breast was inscribed in large letters, ‘Foot, the Traitor.’ (The member’s name was Mr. Foot.) Many brave attempts were made on the part of the secret society men to remove the offensive effigy; but the passages to the belfry of West College were well and bravely guarded by men who could not be intimidated, and who intended to make the secret society men feel sick. After one or two days I think the E. U. men retired, and the effigy was removed by the college servants.

“This movement was a success, and the anti-secret society became a power, and I have been informed that our example was followed in other colleges.”

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE CONSTITUTION.

By FRANK S. CHILD, HAMILTON, '75.

The founders of our Fraternity were men of profound convictions. They believed that one's life work is of infinite importance and they earnestly sought the largest preparation for it. The literary clubs or unions which flourished in our colleges half a century ago were designed to supplement the work of the classroom. But they lacked coherence, unity, vitality, breadth. The impulse which explains their origin was not strong enough to insure their perpetuity. They were superseded, therefore, by the Greek-letter societies. The secret character of these latter organizations made them objectionable to a large class of the better students. It was common report that intellectual culture, in every form, was tabooed in their meetings. Occasionally some of their societies degenerated to such an extent that they became nothing more than convivial clubs. A class of men who felt the need of closer companionship, higher aims, cleaner lives, more thorough culture in the college world, — a class of men "who believed that secret societies were anti-Christian in principle, and calculated to destroy the harmony of college, to create distinctions not founded on merit, and produce strife and animosity," gave themselves to the work of founding an anti-secret association.

Although these various associations in the several colleges assumed different names, they possessed a common aim and spirit.

On the 14th of October, 1847, the Corresponding Secretary of the Social Fraternity of Hamilton College was instructed to "write to the different anti-secret associations of the Eastern colleges, and ascertain their views relating to the expediency of publishing a union catalogue, and of so modifying our constitution as to express the views of all." Further correspondence with the associations of Williams, Union, and Amherst resulted in the convention which met at Troy, Nov. 10, 1847.

The delegates to this convention of the Anti-Secret Confederation — convinced that the "evils resulting from secret societies are such as can be suppressed only by action combined with principle," that "no class of students should be invested with factitious advantages," that "all should be placed upon an equal footing in running the race of honorable distinction," that "the only superiority worth acknowledging is the superiority of merit" — adopted a platform embodying these ideas, pledged their mutual support and counsel to each other, took action with reference to the catalogue, and then adjourned.

The convention which met with the Union Chapter on July 10, 1851, was not a little helpful in fostering fraternal feeling and rendering a better expression to the principles and purposes of the Fraternity. The delegates, and the associations which they represented, looked upon their opportunities with a largeness of view not always characteristic of young men in college. A certain noble type of character served them as their ideal. They proposed to themselves some approximation to that ideal which they so devoutly cherished. This was the mission of the various associations as distinguished from the convivial and other harmful tendencies of the secret societies. It was proposed in the very days when the confederation was organized that the members should acknowledge their social, moral, and intellectual obligations. They were to seek strength, enjoyment, inspiration, in helpful social intercourse. They were to bind themselves by certain moral considerations, and refrain from those indulgences which stupefy and demoralize the man. They were to discipline themselves, by thorough study and the frequent performance of duties, in such mental pursuits as are best cultivated by college literary societies.

But it was the convention which convened at Burlington, Vt., on October 13, 1852, that put the "Articles of Confederation" into a serviceable and satisfactory shape. The committee on "Articles of Confederation" consisted of Miner, of Williams, Goodrich and Rehoo, of Union. The following report, which they presented, was adopted:—

ARTICLES OF CONFEDERATION.

I. — WE the several anti-secret societies of Williams, Union, Amherst, Hamilton, Western-Reserve, and Middletown Colleges, and Vermont University, in order to secure greater unity, permanency and efficiency of effort, do agree to form a general Union, to be styled The Anti-Secret Confederation.

II. — SECTION 1. The Officers of this Confederation shall be a President, Vice-President, and Secretary, to be elected by each Chapter in the order of their seniority. The officers of the year 1853-54 to be elected by the Chapter at Amherst. The term of the office shall be one collegiate year.

SECT. 2. It shall be the duty of the President to preside at all meetings of the Confederation during his term of office; to call a convention once in two years at such place as shall have been determined at the preceding convention; to call extra meetings at the request of two-thirds of the Chapters, and to receive all requests from societies wishing to join the Confederation.

SECT. 3. In case of the inability of the President, the Vice-President shall perform his duties.

SECT. 4. The Secretary shall keep a record of each meeting of the Confederation in a book provided for this purpose.

III. — A triennial catalogue shall be published by the Officers of the Confederation for that year.

IV. — The several Chapters shall correspond with each other at least as often as once a term.

V. — The Preamble, Constitution, Name, and Badge shall be uniform, — each Chapter retaining the power of making its own internal regulations; the Chapter at Vermont University to retain their present name and badge till they see fit to change them.

VI. — These Articles of Confederation, together with the following Preamble and Constitution, may be amended by a two-thirds vote of a convention of delegates from the several Chapters, each Chapter having one vote. A majority of all the Chapters shall constitute a quorum.

After these articles were adopted a committee of three, consisting of Messrs. Heath, of University of Vermont, Powell, of Hamilton, and Rebo, of Union, were appointed by the Chair to report additional Articles of Confederation. The following articles, which they presented, were inserted in the report of the former committee, and accepted as additional sections of Article II. :—

“SECT. 5. Upon application of any society for admission into the Confederation it shall be the duty of the President to authorize and send a delegation from some neighboring Chapter, to enquire into and examine the condition and prospects of said society, who shall transmit said report to each Chapter of the Confederation.

“SECT. 6. Each Chapter shall act upon said report, and transmit the action to the President, who shall communicate it to the society desiring admission.

“SECT. 7. No Chapter shall be admitted to the Confederation except by the unanimous vote of the Confederation.”

In 1854 the Confederation held session at Williamstown, Mass., on October 25 and 26.

Mr. Sprague, of Amherst, offered an amendment to Article II., Section 2, of the “Articles of Confederation.” “And such requests being preferred by the President to the different Chapters, the said society shall be received upon the consent of three-fourths of the whole number of Chapters.”

An amendment, offered by Mr. Avery, of Hamilton, to the effect that “Each Chapter of the Confederation shall be allowed to elect such honorary members as they may see fit, provided their principles accord with the principles of the Association,” was accepted by this convention, but rescinded by the convention which met at Amherst in 1857.

The Amherst convention assembled May 13. The Committee on “Articles of Confederation”—Messrs. Eldridge, of Middlebury, Parsons, of Williams, and Morse, of Waterville—suggested the following amendments, which were adopted :—

(a) That Article I. read thus: "We, the several anti-secret societies of Williams, Union, Amherst, Hamilton, Waterville, and Middlebury Colleges, and Rochester University, in order," etc.

(b) That Section 2 of Article II. be made to read: "It shall be the duty of the President to preside at all the meetings of the Confederation during his term of office; to call a convention once a year at such time and place as shall have been determined at a preceding Convention," etc.

(c) That Section 2 of Article III. read: "That the triennial catalogue be hereafter published at Amherst College." (This amendment was offered by Mr. Baker, of Hamilton.)

On May 12, 1858, the Confederation met in convention at Hamilton College. The Chair appointed as a Committee on Revision, Messrs. Hawley, of Amherst, Lloyd, of Williams, and Adams, of Hamilton. The important action of the convention took shape in the adoption of the pin as our Fraternity badge. It was on May 13, 1858, that the present ΔY Fraternity badge was adopted, and from that time the Anti-Secret Confederation was in reality the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, though it was not till 1864 that the Constitution declared such to be the name. Amendments were made to the Constitution as follows:—

(a) Section 1 of Article II. "The officers of this Confederation shall be a President, Vice-President, and Secretary, to be elected annually from the graduate members, — the Secretary to be elected by the several Chapters in order of seniority, — for the year 1858 and 1859 by the Williams Chapter."

(b) Section 2 of Article II. "The last clause to be omitted, viz.: 'to receive all requests,' " etc.

(c) Section 4 of Article II. "The Secretary shall keep a record of each meeting of the Confederation, in a book provided for that purpose, and receive all requests from societies wishing to join the Confederation."

In conformity with the amendment passed at this convention, marked (a), Rev. George Kerr, '39, of Williams Chapter, was elected President; and the Rev. A. M. Stowe, '49, of Hamilton Chapter, was elected Vice-President.

The lack of fraternal feeling was emphasized by the men in convention; for it was a current opinion that the members of the Fraternity were less to one another than loyalty to principles demanded. If this resulted from a defect in the Constitution the members of the Fraternity failed to detect it for several years, since no important changes were made until 1864.

At Springfield, Mass., July 6, 1859, Messrs. Leonard, of Hamilton, Lent, of Rochester, and Beardslee, of Rutgers (Rutgers and Bowdoin Chapters had recently joined the Confederation), were appointed on the Committee of Revision. Article I. was amended by inserting the words "Bowdoin and Rutgers." Article IV. was amended so as to read "a quadrennial catalogue," etc. A new article was inserted between Article II. and Article III.: "The oldest three Chapters of this Confederation, viz.: Williams, Union, and Amherst, shall have the power of admitting new Chapters during the interim between the conventions, the action to be subject to the ratification of the succeeding convention." Section 2 of Article II. was made to read: "The Secretary shall keep a record of each meeting of the Confederation, in a book provided for that purpose, receive all requests from societies wishing to join the Confederation, and forward the same to the Chapter at Williams." Section 1 of Article II., after long discussion, was amended as follows: "The officers of the Confederation shall be a President, Vice-President, and Secretary, to be chosen biennially. The President and Vice-President shall be elected at a convention of the Confederation from delegates present; the Secretary shall be elected from the junior class by the several Chapters in the order of seniority. The Chapters from which these officers are chosen shall have power to fill vacancies when such occur."

The discussions at the conventions held at Waterville, May 15, 1861, and at Schenectady, May 14, 1862, did not take shape as amendments, but they prophesied a more elaborate expression of the fraternity principles in the near future.

At Rochester, May 25, 1863, the Constitution was amended to the effect that "The Constitution may be amended by the unanimous vote of all the delegates present at any convention, or a sufficient number to constitute a two-thirds majority of all the Chapters."

Section 1 of Article II. was amended to read: "The President and Vice-President shall be elected each year by the Confederation, and the Secretary shall be from the Chapter with which the convention meets."

Article IV. was amended as follows: "A triennial catalogue shall be published by the senior Chapter." This convention is especially memorable on account of a series of important resolutions offered by the Middlebury Chapter. These resolutions reveal the drift of the Confederation, and therefore are of great historic value. They read:—

"Whereas, we, the Anti-Secret Society of Middlebury College, have found, in our experience, that persons in all respects worthy and desirable candidates for admission to our Fraternity are unable to subscribe to the last clause of Section 1 of Article II. of our Constitution (which reads: 'or who does not avow conscientious and entire opposition to the principles of secret societies in college'), such persons being, at the beginning of their college course, unable to form such an opinion concerning college secret societies as is there implied; and

"Whereas, we have been subjected to injury and failure of valuable additions by said clause; and

"Whereas, we honestly believe that the noble purposes of our Confederation will be sufficiently served by the first part of the above-mentioned section; therefore,

"Resolved, That we earnestly request our respected Confederation to consider whether the striking out the said clause may not be of vital importance to the good cause in which we labor."

After prolonged and candid consideration these resolutions were adopted, the clause was stricken from the Constitution, and a motion made and carried to this effect: "That the interpretation of the phrase 'secret societies,' beyond those permanent organizations which have Chapters in different colleges, be left to the discretion of each Chapter."

When the Confederation met at Middlebury, May 9 and 10, 1864, the attendance was small, — only four Chapters being represented; but a large amount of important work was done. The Committee on Revision of the Constitution consisted of Messrs. Parmelee, of Rochester, Bates, of Hamilton, Prentiss, of Middlebury, and Jones, of Rutgers. The committee was largely indebted to the untiring zeal and energy of Mr. Prentiss, who had previously prepared a new form of the Constitution. This was submitted to the committee. After subjecting the paper to various modifications, the committee presented it to the convention. At a special session, when the new Constitution was the subject under discussion, Mr. Prentiss moved the adoption of the following resolution: —

"Resolved, That the Articles of Confederation, Preamble and Constitution of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, governing the several Chapters of the Anti-Secret Confederation, be, and they are hereby repealed; and the following Constitution of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, as amended by this convention, be adopted in their stead." Motion to adopt the resolution was unanimously carried.

The following resolution was also adopted: —

"Resolved, That all laws, ordinances, and acts of the Anti-Secret Confederation, or the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, adopted by any convention or Chapter thereof, conflicting with the provisions of the Constitution just adopted by this Fraternity, be, and they are hereby declared null and void on and after the receipt of a copy of the said Constitution by the several Chapters."

The new Constitution as adopted by this convention — the first elaborate declaration of Fraternity aim, thought, principle — reads as follows: —

DELTA UPSILON FRATERNITY.

PREAMBLE.

Believing that secret societies are calculated to destroy the harmony of college, to create distinctions not founded on merit, to produce strife and animosity, we feel called upon to exert ourselves to counteract the evil tendency of such associations.

We believe that the evils resulting from them are such as can be suppressed only by action combined with principles.

We are confident that the great objects of equality, fraternity, and morality may be attained without resorting to the veil of secrecy.

We, therefore, the several Anti-Secret Societies of Hamilton and Waterville Colleges, the University of Rochester, and Middlebury, Rutgers, and Jefferson Colleges, in order to secure greater unity, permanency, and efficiency of effort, do agree to form ourselves into a Fraternity for the purpose of counteracting the evil tendency of secret associations in College, for maintaining and diffusing liberal principles, and for promoting intellectual, social, and moral improvement.

In doing this, we trust that we have at heart the best interests of the institutions, to which we belong, and that we are directed by the light of experience, the suggestions of reason, and the dictates of conscience.

We adopt, as our guide, the following

ARTICLE VIII.

AMENDMENTS.

This Constitution may be amended by resolutions adopted by two-thirds of all the Chapters of the Fraternity, such resolutions having been adopted in convention, or forwarded in writing to the President of the Fraternity.

The period extending from 1865 to 1873 was uneventful so far as changes in the Constitution are concerned. Quiet prosperity witnessed the sterling worth and substantial merits of Fraternity sentiment and principle. The annual conventions which voice the demands of the Chapters were undisturbed by any important agitation. The Fraternity grew strong, healthful, influential, enlarged its borders, and continued sturdily in its ordered course. The various minor changes made in the Constitution were of a character that indicated no "change of base" or "yielding of a principle," but simply touched the numerous details of method and manner.

In the account of the Rochester convention, 1866, we find, "It was resolved to publish a semi-annual periodical in the interests of the Fraternity." At the Rutgers convention of 1868 the following amendment was passed:—

"Resolved, That Art. VII. be amended by adding the following section, to be known as Section 3: 'A semi-annual shall be published by the Fraternity under the name of OUR RECORD. Its object shall be to furnish a complete record of matters of interest to the Fraternity, and to afford a medium for the interchange of ideas between graduate and active members. It shall be edited by a graduate member with the assistance of an undergraduate in each Chapter. The editor shall hold his office during the pleasure of the Fraternity, and his assistants during the pleasure of their respective Chapters. Each Chapter shall subscribe for one copy for each member and one extra copy for every four members; one-third of the extra copies to be at the disposal of the editors.'"

At the Amherst convention of 1873, Messrs. Parker, of Rochester, Merrill, of Amherst, Enos, of Hamilton, Eaton, of Middlebury, and Miller, of Madison, comprised, the Committee on Revision. They suggested changes in the preamble, as follows, (all contained in the preamble before its words "We, therefore the several Anti-Secret Societies" being stricken out, etc.): "Believing that secrecy in college societies tends rather to evil than to good, and believing also that the great object of a college fraternity — equality, fraternity, morality, and general culture — may be attained without resorting to the veil of secrecy." Also the words, "Of counteracting the evil tendency of secret associations in college" to be stricken out. Also the phrase "Or countenance," in Section 3 of Article II. to be omitted. The convention, acting upon the suggestions of the committee, made the amendments named.

At Marietta, Section 3 of Article VI. was so amended as to read: "A triennial catalogue of the Fraternity, containing the Constitution and the names of all members of the Fraternity, arranged under their respective Chapters, shall be published by the Chapter designated by the Fraternity in convention three years before the issue of the same." So the question of triennial publication, that had fluctuated for years, like the price of stocks in Wall street, was finally and satisfactorily settled.

The Fortieth Annual convention assembled in New Brunswick, May 12, 1875. Messrs. Woods, of Hamilton, Wyckoff, of Rutgers, Reese, of Brown, Sharpless, of Marietta, and Bagen, of New York, constituted the Committee on Revision. This committee suggested changes in Section 3 of Article II., Section 1 of Article IV., Section 2, of Article IV., Sections 3 and 4 of Article IV., Section 1 of Article V., Section 3 of Article V., Section 1 of Article VI. The report of this committee, through some mistake, was not submitted to the Chapters, so that the following convention had the task to do over again. The suggested changes were carefully considered, both in convention and by the various Chapters, for the ensuing two years. The Revision Committee of the Madison convention of 1876 included Messrs. Milliken, of Rutgers, Bagen, of New York, Brown, of Madison, and Pierson, of Amherst. Their report was made in 1877, to the convention held at Rochester. Some of their suggestions were accepted, others rejected. Certain supplementary sections were discussed.

It was evident from the tone of remarks that the men of the Fraternity considered active opposition to other Greek-letter societies a thing of the past. The task of Delta Upsilon in the future was to take other shape. By stimulating men to honorable effort; by showing that the vices of secret societies are avoided, and the rich results of true fellowship are best attained through an association that does not resort to silly signs and ridiculous rites; by encouraging all that is good, pure, manly, estimable, in the individual; by emphasizing these influences and labors, Delta Upsilon was to render her mission historic.

Meanwhile the suggested amendments to the Constitution were of such importance that action was again delayed, and at the Madison convention of 1878, Mr. Montignani, of Cornell, offered a resolution, "That a Committee of five be appointed by the Chair to consider the objections made by the several Chapters to the new Constitution, and to propose such further amendments as may be deemed advisable." Messrs. Montignani, of Cornell, Van Wort, of Michigan, Cass, of Madison, Hutchinson, of Syracuse, and Fish, of Middlebury, were appointed by the Chair to do this work. When this committee reported it was voted that the printing of the Constitution be delayed. Certain changes were to be made at a subsequent date, and it was felt that it was best for the matter to rest for another year. The business came to a final adjustment at the Middlebury convention of 1879. The amendment to the preamble, the amendments and verbal corrections to the Constitution, were all adopted, and Union Chapter was chosen to publish the revised Constitution. (The full text will supplement this article.)

In 1879 the following resolution was adopted:—

"Resolved, That a committee of five, three graduates and two undergraduates, be requested to be incorporated as the Executive Council of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, with powers to grant charters to the several Chapters to take charge of the financial affairs of the Fraternity, and have the general direction of the Fraternity, subject to the instruction and approval of the Fraternity in convention assembled. There shall be three graduate members of the Council appointed now, first to hold office three years, second two years, and third one year. There shall be two undergraduate members of the Council appointed annually and to hold office one year. This Council shall send one delegate to each annual convention, shall have its head-quarters in New York City, and its members shall be residents of New York State. This Council shall be incorporated only upon the assent of two-thirds of the Chapters of the Fraternity."

After delay, caused by some of the members of the Council not having the legal qualifications, it was at last reported, in convention of 1882, that it was possible to incorporate the Fraternity in New York under the general law, but that it was impracticable to do so owing to minor provisions in regard to the debts and possessions of incorporated bodies.

The outcome of this matter was, that in 1882 the Executive Council was added to the list of Fraternity officers.

Few changes have been made since 1879. The following amendments, offered respectively by Cornell, Marietta, and Amherst, at the Amherst convention of 1880, were adopted one year later, at the Brown convention:—

Section 1 of Article III. "The officers of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity shall be a President, three Vice-Presidents, two of whom shall be graduate members, and one an undergraduate of the Fraternity, Secretary, Treasurer, Chaplain, and Executive Council."

"ARTICLE VIII. This Constitution may be amended in convention by resolutions adopted by two-thirds of the Chapters represented in such convention, provided that notice of such proposed amendments be sent to each Chapter, in writing, at least three weeks previous to such convention."

Section 5 of Article V. "A catalogue of the Fraternity, containing the names of all members of the Fraternity, arranged under their respective Chapters, shall be published every five years, under the direction of some alumnus, designated by the Fraternity. At the beginning of the section devoted to each Chapter, shall be placed a short history of said Chapter; to each name shall be attached post-office address, present occupation, and biographical facts of importance."

The sentiment of the Fraternity was definitely expressed by a motion to abolish from our papers and symbols the term "anti-secret," as this term no longer declared our attitude to college secret societies. In its place the term "non-secret" was inserted.

The Fraternity, in convention at Ann Arbor, October 25, 1882, adopted Section 8 of Article IV., which reads as follows:—

"Each chapter shall be entitled to at least two delegates in the Fraternity convention. An additional delegate shall be allowed to every Chapter, for each ten active members in excess of twenty-five."

Section 9 of Article IV. was also adopted: "Fraternity taxes shall be levied by the Fraternity Treasurer after advising with a committee of two from the Chapter that is to entertain the convention for the year in which the tax is levied. The tax shall be a per capita tax on each active member in the three upper classes."

The Constitution was amended at the Marietta convention of October, 1883 (Section 2 of Article V.), to the effect that "Alumni Chapters may be formed in centrally located cities on the same conditions as undergraduate Chapters. These Chapters shall have all the privileges of other Chapters, including representation in conventions."

This convention also passed the following resolutions upon the management of the Quarterly:—

"I. The DELTA UPSILON QUARTERLY shall be issued between the 1st and 20th days of January, April, June, and October.

"II. The QUARTERLY shall be edited and published in New York City, and the subscription price shall be one dollar ($1.00) a year.

“ III. The Editorial Board shall consist of the Managing Editor, a Business Manager, and three Editors-at-large, one from the older Alumni, one from the young Alumni, and one from the Undergraduates.

“ IV. The Managing Editor and Business Manager shall either be Undergraduates or Alumni, and their salaries shall be fixed by the Executive Council or by a committee appointed by the Fraternity for that purpose.

“ V. Duties. — The Managing Editor shall have general charge of the QUARTERLY, shall preside at all meetings of the Board, and shall have general supervision of the Chapter reports, editorials, and articles.

“ 2. The Business Manager shall attend to all subscriptions, transact all business with the printers and the advertisers (if any), correct the proof of the QUARTERLY, and keep the books of the Board.

“ 3. The three Editors-at-large shall contribute at least one editorial or article to each number of the QUARTERLY, and shall write on such subjects as the Managing Editor shall appoint. As far as possible, they shall attend every regular meeting of the Board. They shall not receive a salary.

“ VI. The Editors-at-large shall be chosen by each convention. The Managing Editor and Business Manager shall remain in office for a term of two years.

“ 1. In case of resignation or death, any member of the Board shall be replaced by the Executive Council or the committee appointed by the Fraternity for that purpose.

“ VII. Each Chapter shall, as soon as possible after each Fraternity Convention, elect an Associate Editor for the QUARTERLY, and notify the Managing Editor of its choice.

“ 1. The duties of each Associate Editor shall be to collect for each issue of the QUARTERLY the news from his Chapter, and present the views of his Chapter in the form of an editorial, article, or communication, as the Managing Editor shall direct him, or he himself shall think best. He shall also endeavor to secure from the Undergraduate or Alumni members of his Chapter, literary articles, communications, or poems.

“2. After the fourth issue of the QUARTERLY, each Associate Editor shall communicate to the Editorial Board a report of expenses incurred for postage, etc., and the Managing Editor shall reimburse him for such expenses.

“3. In case the Chapter change the Associate Editor, the Corresponding Secretary shall at once notify the Managing Editor of the change.

“4. If an Associate Editor fails to communicate anything to a number of the QUARTERLY, or to obey the directions of the Managing Editor, the Managing Editor shall notify the Chapter that its Associate Editor is dismissed and request a new appointment.

“VIII. The head-quarters of the QUARTERLY shall be in the rooms occupied by the Central Office, the New York Graduate Chapter and the New York Undergraduate Chapter. The Business Manager shall arrange a fair adjustment of the rent with the other occupants, subject to the approval of the Editorial Board and the Executive Council.

“IX. All surplus of receipts over and above expenses shall be transferred by the Business Manager to the Fraternity Treasurer after the fourth issue of the year, and a financial report shall also be furnished, which the Treasurer shall read before the Convention.”

Another important set of resolutions was proposed by Amherst Chapter and adopted by this convention.

“1. The head-quarters of the Executive Council shall be at the Central Office. The Council shall appoint one of its members Secretary, who can be always communicated with by letters addressed to him at the Central Office.

“2. All applications for money for Fraternity purposes must be addressed to the Secretary of the Executive Council at least two months before the date at which the money is required.

“3. No applications shall be granted except to the authorized agents of work which was voted upon in Fraternity convention.

“4. On receipt of application the Secretary of the Executive Council shall arrange for a meeting of the Council as soon as possible, at which meeting the application shall be considered. If the application is approved the Secretary shall so instruct the Fraternity Treasurer; if disapproved, or deemed excessive, the application shall be returned at once to the applicant, with reasons for rejection.

“5. On receipt of the application, as approved, the Fraternity Treasurer shall assess the amount in equal shares upon each member of the Fraternity, and shall notify the Treasurer of each Chapter of the amount to be collected, and the date at which it must be received.

“6. (a) The Chapter Treasurer must return the assessed amount to the Fraternity Treasurer before the appointed date.

“(b) If any Chapter objects to the levy, or deems the amount excessive, its Treasurer shall communicate the same to the Fraternity Treasurer, with reasons for objections, at least one week before the appointed date.

“(c) If a majority of the Chapters thus vote the Fraternity Treasurer shall return the application to the Secretary of the Executive Council as disapproved by the Fraternity, and by him it shall be returned to the applicant.

“(d) If a majority of the Chapters do not thus vote the Fraternity Treasurer shall notify the Treasurers of the objecting Chapters that the application is approved by the Fraternity, and no further objection shall be considered.”

It will be observed from this brief survey of the subject that the principles and opinions which moved the founders fifty years ago still hold sway, although they are agreeably modified in the language of the Constitution; that the sentiment of the Fraternity remains essentially the same, although we find it has been expressed by a different phraseology; that the Fraternity purposes and tasks still look towards the largest, richest manhood, although the early fierce spirit of antagonism has been generously tempered by broad, wise charity.

The prosperous past speaks as a prophet foretelling a splendid future. "Justice our foundation," gives promise of a royal superstructure for the Delta Upsilon Fraternity.

AMENDMENTS.

This Constitution may be amended in convention by resolutions adopted by two-thirds of the Chapters represented in such convention, provided that notice of such proposed amendments be sent to each Chapter at least three weeks previous to such convention.

RECORDS OF EARLY CONVENTIONS.

The first convention was held in Troy, N.Y., November 10, 1847. A second was held in Albany on the fourth Wednesday in May, 1849; a third in Williamstown, Mass., probably in May, 1850; and a fourth with Union Chapter, July 10, 1851. It has not been found possible to give the records of these conventions; but the nature of their proceedings will be found in the chapter on "The Development of the Badge."

1852.

The convention of 1852 met with the Delta Psi Chapter of Vermont University on October 13. In the absence of the regular officers, Amos H. Coolidge, of Amherst, was called to the chair, and C. R. Ballard was appointed Secretary, until other regular officers could be elected. The committee on nomination of regular officers reported as follows to the Convention:—

For President, P. SMEALLIE, of Union.

The Committee on Constitution made their report for which, see the article on "The Development of the Constitution."

The Committee on Articles of Confederation reported no progress, and was discharged. It was decided to issue a catalogue in the spring.

The Committee on Resolutions then presented the following report:—

1. Resolved, That we believe the principles on which our organization is based have never exerted a wider and more salutary influence than at present.

2. Resolved, That, in consideration of this fact, we are called upon not only to take courage, but also to guard lest in our strength we forget prudence, and suffer those innovations which will work the downfall, rather than the triumph, of our principles.

3. Resolved, That secrecy is an unnecessary influence in any college association, and, as far as any direct influence can be attributed to secret societies, it is a bad influence.

4. Resolved, That we are not an anti-secret confederation merely, but fraternities discarding the principles of secrecy.

5. Resolved, That no member of this order violates its principles in joining the Phi Beta Kappa Society.

6. Resolved, That we learn with sorrow the unpromising condition of the Chapter at Wesleyan University; that we tender to those who remain faithful to our principles our sincere sympathy, and earnestly recommend to them to take courage and go forward.

WILLIAMS CHAPTER.¹

Our Chapter was organized in 1834. For the last two years secret societies have increased, and anti-secret societies have lost many of their members. Our numbers at present are seventeen.

S. B. FORBES,
JAMES ORTON,
E. L. LINCOLN.

UNION CHAPTER.

Our Chapter was organized in 1838. For years the Chapter met with the most determined opposition. The society has never had a hall in which to hold its meetings, and the discussion on the subject has created a great deal of ill feeling. About the same time a proposition was made that the society demand from the Faculty an expression of their minds concerning our object, and, if unfavorable, disband. From these discussions, alienation and withdrawal resulted, and at the first meeting of the first term our active membership was reduced to seven. Our numbers at present are fifteen.

W. J. ROBINSON.

AMHERST CHAPTER.

We number at the present time eighty members. In morals and scholarship we are unimpeachable. We are soon to publish a series of communications we have had with the Faculty about our aims and ends, a copy of which will be sent to each Chapter.

EZRA T. SPRAGUE,
HORACE L. SINGLETON.

HAMILTON CHAPTER.

The Chapter at Hamilton was organized in 1847. Its members have ever been men of the great intellectual and moral strength. We have at present some thirty-four acting members. Our scholarship in the present graduating class is two-tenths higher than that of any other society.

Morality and religion are not only countenanced, but practised among us. In our society resides the moral power of Hamilton College.

N. N. AVERY,
A. L. BENTON.

ROCHESTER CHAPTER.

Our Chapter was organized in the year 1853, under very unfavorable circumstances. Since our organization we have met with unbounded success. In scholarship and morality our standard is high.

JOHN N. WHIDDEN.

The Committee on Conventions reported Amherst College as next place of meeting. The report was adopted.

The following resolution was offered and adopted:—

Resolved, That the President and Secretary of the Confederation be instructed to inquire of the Chapters not represented in convention the reason therefor, and to determine according to the Articles of Confederation, which Chapter is entitled to the next officers, and that they communicate as soon as possible this information to each of the Chapters.

The following resolution was adopted:—

Resolved, That we tender our sincere thanks to the members of the Williams Chapter for our entertainment during the session of the convention.

The convention then adjourned sine die.

Roll was called. For delegates see page 85.

Minutes of last convention read and adopted.

Moved that the delegates of the several Chapters prepare their several reports to be read at the next session.

On motion a committee was appointed to draft rules of order.

Mr. Eldredge, delegate from Middlebury, made a request for an admission as a member of the General Confederation. The request was granted.

It was stated that, through the influence of some of the members of the Williams Chapter, a society had been formed in Hobart Free College, Geneva, N.Y., on the same principles with ours; and that a delegation had been appointed by that society to attend and make application for admission at this convention, which had not yet arrived. No action was therefore taken.

The convention then adjourned to meet again at 9 A.M. of the following day.

AMHERST, May 14, 9 A.M.

Convention was opened with prayer.

Minutes of last session read and approved.

The Committee on Rules of Order reported the rules that had regulated the previous conventions.

The convention then proceeded to Chapter reports.

WILLIAMS CHAPTER.

Previous to the last convention the Williams Chapter had been decreasing in influence. Since then, by repeated labors in circulating printed documents, the society has, to a large extent, increased. We have been much strengthened by the action of the Harvard seniors. An effort was made by several members of the college to dispense with all societies, whether secret or anti-secret.

ANDREW PARSONS,
IRVING MAGEE.

AMHERST CHAPTER.

We number at present some fifty members. In scholarship and morals we maintain our usual position. The Faculty are willing to acknowledge that we have done a good work. In the burning of a college building we lost our hall, furniture, and all our papers; but we are determined to fit up a new hall as soon as practicable.

J. C. CLAPP,
DENIS WORTMAN, JR.

HAMILTON CHAPTER.

Since the last convention our Chapter has altered very much. Feeling that in unity there is strength we have allowed our numbers to decrease very much. We have acted very much on the exclusive principle, taking only the more worthy. As for prizes and standing we are second to no other organization in the college. For the last three years there has been much said about our badge. The matter was brought up at the last Confederation, but, as it was not granted by the Confederation, we saw fit to adopt the name Theta Sigma, and our motto, θέμις και σόφια. We have inscribed upon our badge the motto of the Confederation, and preserve its principles in their entirety.

JAS. S. BAKER,
ALBERT ERDMAN.

WATERVILLE CHAPTER.

We were organized under many difficulties, and have had many trials since our organization. We have a fine hall and are enjoying a fair degree of prosperity. We are encouraged for the future.

F. L. MORSE,
M. J. PRESCOTT.

ROCHESTER CHAPTER.

We number fourteen. We maintain a high rank in scholarship and morals. During the past year we have had the absolute control of one literary society. Much division has been occasioned among us by the badge question, and we have decided to dispense with a badge entirely until the Confederation adopt one uniform and agreeable to the several Chapters.

GEORGE TRUESDALE.

MIDDLEBURY CHAPTER.

At present our society nearly equals the secret societies in numbers, nor are we behind them in other respects. In every class we have more than our portion of college honors. We are confident for the future.

L. D. ELDRIDGE.

After these reports it was moved and carried that Mr. Erdman, of Hamilton, be authorized to purchase a book, and be instructed to copy the minutes of all past conventions of the Confederation therein.

It was moved by Mr. Baker, of Hamilton, that the present badge of the Confederation be changed to a pin. This was seriously discussed. As a test the following resolution was offered:—

Resolved, That the several Chapters shall conform to the will of the majority of the convention in the selection of a badge, whatever that badge may be, if the motion now before the house shall pass.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Eldredge made the qualification, in behalf of the Middlebury Chapter, that he is not fully authorized to vote on the resolution, but he gives it as his firm belief that the new badge will be received and will be the regular badge of their Chapter.

The debate then turned upon the motion proper. The vote on the motion was as follows:—Williams Chapter, nay; Amherst Chapter, aye; Hamilton Chapter, aye; Rochester Chapter, aye;

Waterville Chapter, nay ; Middlebury Chapter, aye ; consequently carried four to two.

As Committee on Badges the President appointed Messrs. Magee, Baker, Truesdale, and Eldredge.

Committees on State of Confederation and Articles of Confederation were appointed, and the convention adjourned till 3 P.M. of the same day.

AMHERST, May 14, 1857, 3 P.M.

Mr. Truesdale in the chair.

Convention opened with prayer.

Records of last session read and adopted.

Messrs. Magee, of Committee on Badges, reported that the majority of the committee were in favor of the Middlebury Chapter's badge (Zeta Phi), and recommended that to the Confederation.

It was then moved that the report be adopted, on which ensued an animated discussion which was terminated by a motion to lay it on the table.

The Committee on Articles of Confederation made their report.

It was then moved that a committee be appointed to report a place for the next convention.

Convention adjourned till 8 P.M.

AMHERST, May 14, 1857, 8 P.M.

Session opened with prayer.

Minutes of last session read and approved.

It was moved that the motion previously before the convention, but which had been laid upon the table, be now taken from the table. Carried.

Much discussion ensued, in which Waterville and Hamilton said that, as for changing from a key to the Middlebury badge, it was impossible, from the fact that the Middlebury badge was too much like that of secret societies in their respective colleges.

A motion was made that the motion to change the badge be laid on the table till the next convention, and that a committee be appointed to select badges to present at the next convention.

The last clause was amended to read "A committee of three Chapters shall be appointed, each of which shall appoint a member of a committee of three.

The motion thus amended was carried.

The Chapters thus appointed were Amherst, Waterville, and Williams.

The Committee on Convention reported in favor of fourth Wednesday of May, 1858, Hamilton College; Convention to come into session at 9 A.M.

It was moved that a committee of the Amherst Chapter be appointed to attend to the publication of the Articles of Confederation, and that the delegates signify how many each Chapter will take.

It was moved and carried that the key be the badge of the Anti-Secret Confederation till some other be chosen.

Resolutions of sympathy with Brother Prescott, of Waterville, who had been detained by sickness from attendance upon the convention, were expressed and carried.

After an hour spent pleasantly in talking of methods in society work, and after expressing thanks to the Amherst brethren for their hospitality, the convention adjourned to 9 A.M. of the 4th Wednesday of May, 1858, in Hamilton College.

GEORGE TRUESDALE, Rochester, '57,

Met in convention at Hamilton College, N.Y., 3 P.M., Wednesday, May 12, 1858.

Convention met by special order of the President, with the consent of the several Chapters, on the 12th of May, instead of the 26th, the time to which the convention had been adjourned.

For delegates see page 86.

The minutes of last convention were read and adopted.

Mr. Garner moved that the rules of order drafted at the last convention be adopted at the present convention. Motion carried.

Moved and carried that the delegates prepare written reports of their Chapter's condition.

Moved and carried that a Committee on Resolutions be appointed. President appointed Messrs. Erdman, Gardner, and Willey as said committee.

Mr. Gardner, of Amherst, as Chairman of Committee on Badges, rose to report, but asked permission first to introduce the motion that each delegate should bind himself to abide by decision of majority on the acceptance of said report. The Williams delegates made strenuous objections to such a motion, and the motion was dropped. Mr. Gardner then reported as follows: That a majority of the committee, Mr. Bachelder and himself, had decided to adopt the pin as a uniform badge for the Anti-Secret Confederation; and that from the different pins then in use they had decided to adopt one formed by the two Greek letters, Δ and Υ , Delta Upsilon, and stated their reasons for such selection.

The minority report was then called for, and Mr. Painter presented the key as the badge he had decided upon as the uniform badge.

Both majority and minority reports were accepted.

A motion was made to adopt the majority report, which, after some discussion, was postponed, until the first session of the next day.

The following resolution was then offered by Mr. Erdman:—

Resolved, That, in order to strengthen the Confederation, and make the graduates feel a deeper interest in its welfare, and take in it a more active part, the officers of the Confederation be hereafter chosen from among the graduates, allowing the Chapters of the Confederation to choose the Secretary. And that to this end a committee of three Chapters be appointed each to select some one of their graduates to constitute a committee which shall be empowered to make the necessary arrangements.

The following resolution was offered by Mr. Abbot:—

Resolved, That at each annual convention an orator and a poet be appointed by that Chapter at whose college the convention is held, from among its graduates, to deliver an oration and a poem before said convention.

These resolutions were laid upon the table.

It was moved and carried that at the next session each delegate should state his Chapter's method of electioneering men, and of working against secret societies.

On motion the convention adjourned till 7.30 o'clock.

HAMILTON COLLEGE, May 12, 1858, 7.30 P.M.

It was moved and carried that the adoption of the report be postponed till the first session in the P.M.

Mr. Willey moved that our former committee be instructed to procure as good a model of the new badge proposed as possible, and also select some appropriate motto, which it should represent, and present them at the P.M. session.

Reports from Chapters were then called for.

WILLIAMS CHAPTER.

We have almost reached our old standard of membership. We could have twice the membership we have, should we desire it. We prefer to take only worthy men.

C. C. PAINTER,
W. A. LLOYD.

AMHERST CHAPTER.

We maintain our old standard of scholarship and morality. The Faculty have expressed sympathy with our movement.

The loss of our hall has not diminished the interest of our meetings. Cases of expulsion are almost unknown with us.

In Mr. Johnson Putnam, who recently died, the Chapter and Confederation have incurred a serious loss.

EDWARD P. GARDNER,
CHESTER W. HAWLEY.

HAMILTON CHAPTER.

The Hamilton delegates are glad to report for their Chapter a prosperous condition. In the last graduating class we had three of seven honors. Our future prospects are very favorable.

ALBERT ERDMAN,
ALVIN BAKER,
E. P. ADAMS.

WATERVILLE CHAPTER.

We number at present twenty-six. We have a larger number of members than either of the secret societies. We vary our literary exercises to the largest extent possible. A member who left us to join a secret society, we have reason to think, now deeply regrets his action. We have reason to mourn at the untimely death of our Brother Wiggins.

THOMAS F. BACHELDER.

ROCHESTER CHAPTER.

We have had a year of unexampled prosperity. We try, to as large an extent as possible, to cultivate fraternal feelings. We have had, till recently, to bear the opposition of a strong local society. The local society has been transformed into a secret society, and we consider the change beneficial to us.

A. F. WILLEY.

MIDDLEBURY CHAPTER.

In our electioneering campaign of a year ago we labored under difficulty from the fact that we had no badge. Now that we have a badge, our success seems ever so much greater. We have the respect of other societies. In college elections we vote for the best men, whether they belong to us or not.

C. H. FLOWER,
C. F. ABBOTT.

Mr. Erdman's resolution was now called for. Motioned by Bachelder that a committee to revise Articles of Confederation be appointed, and that to such a committee this resolution be referred. Motion carried.

The Williams delegates offered to vote for the motion with this amendment, viz.: That this pin be adopted as the badge of the Confederation, but that the Chapter at Williams be allowed to wear their key as their badge until they see fit to adopt the pin. The motion, thus amended, was unanimously carried.

The Committee on revising Articles of Confederation was called for.

The several resolutions proposed by the committee were adopted separately and as a whole.

1st. Resolved, That the Chapters of the Anti-Secret Confederation were never more interested and earnest in the cause of anti-secrecy and more united in principle, than at the present time, and that we congratulate ourselves upon the great harmony and good feeling which have characterized our proceedings.

2d. Resolved, That, since clannish exclusiveness is an evil to which we are particularly exposed, we earnestly recommend to all the Chapters and members extreme caution that we do not fall into it.

3d. Resolved, That in the advocacy of anti-secrecy we must carefully distinguish between principle and policy, always keeping in view that fundamental principle of morality upon which our cause is founded.

4th. Resolved, That we recommend to the several Chapters to procure a box in the post-office of their respective places, and that they forward the number of the box to each Chapter.

5th. Resolved, That we earnestly advise more attention to that Article of Confederation relating to the correspondence between the Chapters.

6th. Resolved, That we deeply regret the want of interest in the Confederation manifested by the Chapter at Union College, in their failure to send delegates to the convention for the past two or three years, and trust that no such want of interest will hereafter be exhibited.

7th. Resolved, That the good feeling, harmony, and interest in our exercises, has not only tended to unite the delegates, but all the Chapters, and that we feel renewed encouragement to work more earnestly and cheerfully in our good cause, and more confident of success.

ALBERT ERDMAN,
A. F. WILLEY,
E. P. GARDNER.

These resolutions were adopted.

W. A. BRIGGS,

We are happy to make another report. We have now a very prosperous existence. In our graduating class we have seven of the thirty speakers chosen to appear on the commencement stage.

J. P. BUCKLEY.

We hold to our old standard of strict morality. In scholarship we have no equals. Of twenty-three appointments given to the present senior class we have taken no less than nine. The three prizes for excellence in extemporaneous speaking all fell to our society. We number: seniors, fourteen; juniors, eleven; sophomores, seven; freshmen, four; total, thirty-six.

H. J. BRUCE,
LUTHER KEENE, JR.

HAMILTON CHAPTER.

We can truly say that we were never stronger than we are to-day. We have experienced bitter opposition from the secret societies; but we have come off victorious. We number twenty-seven active, energetic men. We maintain our old standard of morality. We have one-half of the honors in the graduating class, three of the appointments to the junior exhibition, and the leaders of the sophomore and freshmen classes. Our meetings are pleasant and entertaining.

BOWDOIN CHAPTER.

We have opposed to us five strong secret societies. We are daily becoming stronger. In scholarship we have few equals. We have the men of the strongest moral character to be found in the college.

J. L. PHILLIPS.

RUTGERS CHAPTER.

We are happy to report the first year of our existence as a prosperous one. We have had little opposition from secret societies. SAMUEL HAMBLÉN, Colby, '62,
President pro tem.

JOHN McLEAN, Hamilton, '62,
Secretary.

The following are the reports of the several Chapters : —

WILLIAMS CHAPTER.

Our society has never been in a better condition. We endeavor to place a copy of the "Opinions of Distinguished Men on Secret Societies," in the hands of every freshman. We do not have among us all the anti-secret men in college. A large portion of the neutrals support us in sentiment. We number at present: seniors, 11; juniors, 11; sophomores, 7; total, 29.

THOMAS E. BRASTOW.

HAMILTON CHAPTER.

The prosperity of our Chapter was never greater. In scholarship we maintain our old position, and certainly have no equal in this respect in any other society in college. Of the seven honorary appointments for the class of '61 Delta U. has received six, each Delta U. senior boldly laying off one. We have the Clark Prize in happy prospective, and the two chemical prizes. Our juniors, sophomores, and freshmen are not behind the seniors in this respect. We have a fine hall and a well-selected library of three hundred volumes.

W. H. H. MILLER,
JOHN MCLEAN.

MIDDLEBURY CHAPTER.

The Chapter in Middlebury now numbers twenty-six men. We were never in a more prosperous condition. We have a hall nicely fitted up in the town, and we often have as attentive listeners to our literary exercises secret-society men. We have a small library. We are strong in fraternal feeling.

S. B. PARTRIDGE.

An addition was made to the effect that the Constitution could be amended by a two-thirds vote of the Chapters assembled in convention. Amendments were carried making the President of the convention elected by the Confederation; the Secretary was to be chosen from the Chapter with which the convention is held. The triennial catalogue was to be published by the senior Chapter.

It was moved that the following series of resolutions, offered by the Middlebury Chapter, be adopted:—

Whereas, We, the Anti-Secret Society of Middlebury College, have found in our experience that persons in all respects worthy and desirable candidates for admittance to our Fraternity are unable to subscribe to the last clause of Section 1, Article II., of our Constitution, reading “or who does not avow conscientious and entire opposition to the principle of secret organizations in college,” such persons being unable, at the beginning of their course, to form such an opinion concerning college secret societies as is there implied; and,

Whereas, We have been subjected to injury and failure of valuable additions by said clause; and,

Whereas, We honestly believe that the noble purposes of our Confederation will be sufficiently served by the first part of the above-mentioned section:—

Therefore Resolved, That we earnestly request our respected Confederation to consider whether the striking out of said clause may not be of vital importance to the good cause in which we labor.

Resolved, That the Corresponding Secretary is hereby directed to forward these resolutions to the convention of our Fraternity, which meets in Rochester, on Wednesday, May 25, 1863.

(Signed)

Adjourned to meet at Canonsburg, Pa., at the call of the President.

ANNIVERSARY.

After prayer by the Rev. Dr. Northup, of the class of '55, Williams, an oration was delivered by Rev. Wm. J. Erdman, Hamilton, '56, and a poem by Rev. Arthur T. Pierson, Hamilton, '57. Then followed a supper, given by the Rochester Chapter, and the usual post-prandial exercises.

1867.

The convention of 1867 was called at New Brunswick, N. J., and not, as the previous convention had arranged, at Canonsburg, Pa. But, at the last moment, it was postponed till the next year. Some of the delegates, who had not been informed of the postponement, went; but no convention was held or business transacted.

1868.

The convention of 1868 was held with the Rutgers Chapter, in New Brunswick, N.J. It assembled Tuesday morning, May 13, at the Fraternity rooms on Hiram street.

An organization was effected by the election of Mr. Geo. E. King, Hamilton, '69, as President pro tempore. Mr. N. B. Sizer, New York, '69, was elected Secretary.

After the presentation of credentials from delegates a committee reported an order of business to be transacted during the session of the convention. Every Chapter, except Middlebury, was represented, and the convention was quite enthusiastic.

The officers for the ensuing year were elected.

Considerable time was occupied in receiving reports of the condition of the various Chapters. These reports showed that the Fraternity, wherever it has been established, is in a flourishing condition with the most flattering prospects for the future. A noteworthy feature of these reports was the prominence given to the element of scholarship as a requisite for admission.

A new and strong Chapter recently organized in Miami University, at Delaware, Ohio, was admitted to full fellowship.

SECOND DAY.

At the morning session on Wednesday the time was spent chiefly in discussing questions pertaining to the business of the organization.

The following resolution was adopted unanimously and without debate: —

Resolved, That the chief object of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity is the intellectual and social cultivation, the moral advancement of its members, and the encouragement and preservation of brotherly feeling and assistance between college students whose principles and sympathies are the same; and that its distinctive feature is opposition, not to the individual members of secret fraternities, but to the evil consequences of their organization as far as they manifest themselves in the various relations of college life.

Action was taken to perfect the arrangements for issuing Our Record, the semi-annual magazine to be published by the Fraternity.

A committee was appointed to compile a song-book for the use of the Fraternity.

In the evening the literary exercises were held at the St. James M. E. Church. The programme was as follows: Prayer by Rev. John V. N. Schenck, Rutgers, '62; address by Rev. Clark B. Oakley, Madison, '66; oration, "Balance Wheel," by Rev.

Samuel J. Rogers, Rutgers, '59; poem, "The Reformed Loves," by Rossiter Johnson, Hamilton, '63. After these exercises the members of the convention and Fraternity repaired to the hotel, where a banquet, with the usual toasts, and responses, fittingly closed the festivities of the occasion.

The minutes of this convention have been taken from the report of the proceedings found in the New Brunswick "Fredonian," of 12th and 14th of May, 1868.

The convention of 1869 was held with Madison Chapter at Hamilton, New York, on the 9th and 10th of June.

An organization was effected on the morning of the first day with Robert W. Haskins, New York, '69, in the chair.

Delegates were present from all the Chapters, and their credentials were received.

In the afternoon one delegate from each Chapter made a report upon the condition and prospects of his respective Chapter. These reports all showed that the members of the Fraternity were live and enthusiastic champions of its principles.

New Chapters were admitted at Brown and Cornell Universities and at Union College.

In the evening many matters touching the interests of the Fraternity were discussed. It was decided that for the present it was expedient for the Fraternity to confine all its efforts in enlarging the number of its Chapters to those colleges where secret societies exist, inasmuch as the object of this society is to overcome their evil influence rather than to gain members. Certain Chapters were authorized to use all their efforts to establish their principles in colleges near them where secret societies had already a foothold.

During this session Brown University was selected as the place for holding the next convention.

SECOND DAY.

At the morning session the propriety of granting charters was discussed, and the Committee on Amendments to the Constitution were instructed to report an article relative to said charters. It was also determined to continue the publication of the Fraternity magazine, and Henry Randall Waite, Hamilton '68, was reelected editor.

In the afternoon the officers for the next year were nominated and elected.

Several amendments were made to the Constitution; the publication of the triennial was determined upon, and the several editors were appointed.

The business of the convention proper had been promptly and systematically despatched, and the convention proper adjourned to meet on the last Wednesday in May, 1870, at Brown University.

At seven o'clock the delegates marched to the Baptist Church, where a large audience listened to an address by Rev. John Dowling, D.D., of New York City, upon "True Nobility," and a poem, by Rev. Leo M. Woodruff, entitled "The Man for the Times." After these exercises a banquet at the Park House closed the festivities of the convention.

The records of the conventions of 1870-83 have been published by the Chapters where the conventions were held. For "The Annual" in which these minutes are printed, see the article on Bibliography.

Only two references to this convention occur in the records of the Western Reserve Chapter. One of March 29, 1871, says: "As to the convention, Bro. Thompson reported that nothing could be done on account of the uncertainty about the Orator and Poet;" and the second at a called meeting, May 1, 1871. "A letter was read by Grant concerning convention. Moved and carried, that it is the sense of this Chapter to postpone the convention until the last week in September." Nothing more is said about a convention in the records until March, 1872, and no reasons are given for the postponement. Probably there was no convention held in the year 1871.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE BADGE.

By J. ALEXANDER ADAIR, HAMILTON, '84.

The badge of our Fraternity is the microcosm of its history. It represents the Fraternity's progress, and its growth from a purely literary to a social as well as literary organization.

The Williams Social Fraternity of 1834 felt no need for a common badge. While the organization seemed to all outward appearance merely literary, there sprang up that fraternal feeling which always arises among those working for a common end, or engaged in a common cause. Principles, without any outward symbols, bound the hearts of our Fraternity's earliest members in strongest friendship.

They feared the adoption of a badge would be a stepping-stone towards the evils which many of the secret societies both practised and espoused.

The presidents of the leading colleges of the land had, shortly before, declared in conference that certain organizations wearing a common badge, whose members individually bound themselves by a solemn oath, were working ruin in the moral and social life of their colleges. To combat these evils it was necessary that the Social Fraternity should secure the hearty support of the Williams Faculty. It is not surprising, then, that the Williams Social Fraternity in its form of organization, and its lack of a badge, differed widely from its sister societies, which the Williams Faculty had pronounced to be wrong, obnoxious, and founded on ruinous principles.

In 1837 the question of the adoption of a common badge first began to be discussed. It is almost absolutely certain that, even before this time, badges of various models were worn. Probably among the most prominent of these was the badge composed of the letters S. and F., representing the words Social Fraternity. Yet this was never authorized by the Fraternity, nor probably worn by the majority of its members. The larger part of the new organization felt the necessity now of a badge, yet the adoption of a badge was a ground for honest differences of opinion.

Upon one side it was declared that the adoption of a common badge would be the first step towards secrecy and ruin.

Other members declared that a badge would strengthen their cause, and would not be an advance towards the evils of secret societies, as the badge thus adopted would be a public declaration of their principles. The strength of the argument of the latter party was felt, and in 1837 the Social Fraternity declared for the adoption of a badge. Caution was now demanded in the selection of a badge, that the feelings of all might be conciliated, and that the new badge, like the new Fraternity's principles, should differ widely from that of its rivals. The badge thus adopted consisted of a square golden key, upon one side of which were the words Social Fraternity, and on the other the motto adopted, οὐδὲν ἄδελφον. The badge and motto were proposed by Charles G. Haseltine, '39, late of Morristown, N. J. All objections which the opponents of a badge may have had were removed by the character of the badge adopted. In its form it was far from being similar to the badges of the secret societies. It most strongly resembled the badge of the Phi Beta Kappa Society, at that time an organization practically non-secret. The new badge soon became popular, and the resolution was soon passed that all members, unless they could give a good excuse, should be expected to wear it. It seems to have been chiefly manufactured by Barnes Sears and Co., New York City.

Almost contemporaneous with the adoption of the badge by the Williams Social Fraternity, an organization with a similar aim took root in Union College. This new society placed a large number of members upon its roll during the first year of its existence, and soon received recognition from its most bitter opponents. During the winter of 1838 it adopted the title Equitable Union, the Williams motto, οὐδὲν ἄδηλον, but preferred a badge represented by the letters O. and A., to the Williams key.

It is proper for us in this connection to observe that the Union and Williams organizations were practically independent of each other. They had a similar aim, a common motto, but no common organization. As they differed in their badge, so they differed in their views on various subjects. Each was supreme in itself.

The key remained as the badge of the Williams Social Fraternity till 1847. Even before this time the key had almost ceased to be the badge of the Fraternity. It was declared to lack beauty, to be unpopular with the members of the Fraternity, and to convey no adequate idea of the society's principles to the outside world. For the key thus abandoned, a pin with the letters S. and F., standing for Social Fraternity, was substituted.

Soon after this change by the Williams Chapter the Union organization discarded the O. A. badge, and adopted, with slight modification, the Williams key. An effort was then made to have Union accept the S. F. badge, and adopt the name of the Williams organization. Such action was impossible, from the fact that in Union there was a secret organization which wore practically the newly adopted pin of Williams.

On July 21, 1847, the Hamilton Chapter was organized. It adopted in substance the Williams Constitution, but deferred action upon the badge until all its members could act more intelligently. On July 10, 1847, a convention of the several anti-secret organizations was held in Schenectady, N. Y. The delegates were few, and no agreement could be reached upon the question of a badge. The results of the discussion are given in the following letter, from the presiding officer of the Social Fraternity in Williams, to the newly organized association in Hamilton: —

“With respect to the convention at Union it was judged very desirable, both for the advantage which might be expected to accrue from the better acquaintance of the members, and for the moral power which we should gain from some kind of a union. But, owing to some misunderstanding between ourselves and the society at Middlebury College, our delegation was not present at the convention which was held on the 10th of July. We have not heard officially the doings of that convention, but from a private letter we understand that they adopted the constitution of the society here in the main; if so, then we have a common constitution. With respect to a common name we are not yet informed of the convention's action. With respect to a common badge, I suppose that, under the present circumstances it is a thing impossible. We have just adopted a pin badge, which we think very becoming, and should not wish to change. The society at Union have just adopted a key badge. They approved our badge, but would not adopt it, because there was a secret society in the college which had the same letters. The badge at Middlebury, which was adopted some three years since, when the society was formed, is a pin in the shape of a harp. So you see there is little probability that we will be able to have the same external representation of our principles. As to badges, each has a different one. The maker of our badge is Mr. John T. Crew, No. 40 State St., Albany.”

The Hamilton organization, after mature deliberation, decided upon the old Williams key, and adopted the name of the Equitable Fraternity. The Hamilton members seem to have been very enthusiastic over this badge, and made a strong effort to secure its adoption in Amherst and Williams.

Possibly no more enthusiastic scene has occurred in our Fraternity's history than that which occurred upon a September morning, when the Hamilton Chapter first exposed their badges to the public gaze. Its thirty members marched from their boarding-house to the college chapel, with the keys dangling from their watch-chains. As they neared the chapel they were greeted with taunts and jeers, and cries of "What time is it?" In answer, the President of the society replied, "The eleventh hour for opposition societies." These words were the omen of the future success of the Hamilton Chapter.

Through the years 1847 and 1848 the badge discussion continued. Each Chapter was unwilling to abandon its badge for that of any of its associates.

In May, 1848, another convention of the Fraternity was held. The badge was the chief topic of consideration. The resolution was passed, that it be our chief effort to secure a common badge. Two badges were submitted, by a vote of the convention, to the consideration of the several associations,—the Williams key and the harp, which had been the badge of the Middlebury Chapter.

Union Chapter held its meeting on the 28th day of May, 1848, and declared for the key. Williams, Amherst, and Hamilton did not want the key, nor were they in favor of the harp. The only hope of union seemed to be in uniting upon some entirely new badge. Thus the discussion seems to have drifted from the adoption of one of the two badges submitted by the convention to the consideration of divers badges proposed by various members.

The Williams Chapter, as early as May 25, 1848, proposed a new model of a key to the various Chapters. It failed, however, to meet with any favor, and on the 3d of June, 1848, they proposed a pin consisting of the letters Δ and Ψ and, the motto, $\Delta\acute{\alpha}\delta\iota\omicron\iota \Psi\acute{\epsilon}\phi\epsilon\omicron\varsigma$ (Enemies to darkness). Hamilton members proposed a pin consisting of the letters θ and ϕ , for which no motto was ever given.

The Amherst Chapter proposed a pin formed from the letters A and S, for which various mottoes were suggested. The key and the harp were also thought of highly by many. The S. F. badge, standing for the words Social Fraternity, and the A. S. C. badge, representing the words Anti-Secret Confederation, were also among the candidates for popular favor.

There were now no less than seven badges whose merits were strongly urged by members in almost every Chapter. Each member of the several associations seems to have been anxious to gain for himself fame by proposing a badge upon which all could unite. Scores of proposed badges, which never gained sufficient popularity to make them worthy of mention in this article, were the result. The problem was no nearer being solved than before. In order to narrow the question, preferences as to a key badge or a pin badge were taken by the several Chapters.

The college year of 1847 and 1848 had closed, and all that had been gained was an expression from the majority of the Confederation in favor of a pin.

As a review of the whole subject, we insert an extract from a letter written at Williams College, June 16, 1848:—

“At an extra meeting of the Social Fraternity, held last evening, the matter of a badge was fully discussed, and after learning the state of things in the various societies, and giving them full weight, a vote was taken, which was almost unanimous, in favor of a pin. You know how then we stand. We are very much opposed to a key for this reason: to procure a key will be about the same as giving up our badge entirely. We have tried a key, and know the results. Before we changed for our present badge there were but few of them worn, and the society felt the effects of this very much.

“You ask: ‘Is it not a want of inclination to procure any badge, which will make so few procure the key?’ It is not. There are some who will not procure any badge, but will procure the pin if it is a good one. As matters are with you at Hamilton we cannot expect to have the Delta Psi, and there is then no pin before us but the Theta Phi. But you have objection to this. It has Greek letters, and resembles the secret societies. This is a strong argument with many in favor of the pin.

“Our society do not like the name Equitable Fraternity, but they do like Theta Phi, and they think the latter quite as expressive as the former. But if Theta Phi will be like the secrets, and so will a key be like the secrets, the one will convey no better idea to the world of our principles than the other. We are not strenuous as to any particular pin, as the Theta Phi, if a more tasty one could be obtained. We cannot see the force in the objection to the Theta Phi pin, that it was once the badge of an anti-secret society. Because they failed shall we also fail? Whether our society will prefer to take the key rather than to have no union remains yet to be seen. We are all desirous of union, but we feel that a union on the key would not be beneficial to us.”

In October of 1848 a vote was taken upon the adoption of a badge. Each society expressed the preference, and it had been agreed that the majority should rule. The problem was not yet solved. Williams unanimously desired the Delta Psi, and Union the Delta Sigma. Amherst was willing to unite upon any badge the others might adopt. Hamilton would adopt any but the Delta Sigma and Delta Psi. In the several Chapters the second choice was almost unanimously given in favor of the Theta Phi badge; yet none seemed willing to accept it aside from the Hamilton Chapter.

On November 7, 1848, Mr. J. G. Ogden, chairman of the badge committee, wrote to the several associations that the Delta Phi and Delta Sigma badges were out of the question, as they both had been badges of secret societies, and therefore directed them to declare their preference for the Theta Phi badge or the Union key. With this action by the chairman of the Badge Committee there began a revolution of feeling in favor of the Union key.

In the May convention of 1849 the Union key was adopted, and a common badge was thus secured. The designs for pins seem to have been so numerous, and the preferences of members so diversified, that the key was the only badge upon which all could unite.

Till the convention of 1852 nothing seems to have been said upon the subject of the badge. In this convention it was declared that all members should wear the badge of the Fraternity.

In September, 1850, an anti-secret organization had been formed in the University of Vermont. It had adopted the mottoes Ὀυδὲν ἄδηλον and Δεξιαῖς καὶ ψυχαῖς (With right hands and hearts), but preferred a pin composed of the J and \emptyset letters, to the key,—the regular badge of the Fraternity. It was, therefore, declared in this same convention that the Delta Psi society should wear their own badge till they saw fit to change. For four years and a half the discussion of the badge rested. The key was almost uniformly worn, and was highly prized by the Fraternity members. The correspondence of this time will show, however, that the Fraternity was filled with discussions as to the beauty of the key, and the adaptation to the society's interests.

A minority were strongly urging the merits of the pin, and brought its efforts to a culmination, when, in the Amherst convention of May 14, 1857, Mr. Baker, of Hamilton, moved a reconsideration of the whole question of the badge. A spirited discussion followed, during which Mr. Wortman, of Amherst, offered the following resolution as a test:—

“Resolved, That the several Chapters shall all conform to the will of the majority of the convention in the selection of a badge, whatever that badge may be, if the motion now before the convention shall pass.”

The resolution was carried. The motion for the adoption of a pin as the badge was also carried. A committee was appointed to report a model of a badge. The committee thus appointed reported, at a subsequent session, that the majority of the committee were in favor of the Zeta Phi, proposed by the Middlebury Chapter. A minority report was brought in, in favor of the Theta Sigma badge, proposed by the Hamilton Chapter. No agreement could be reached upon the question, and after the appointment of Amherst, Waterville, and Williams Chapters as a special badge committee the badge discussion was dismissed.

The convention of 1858 met with the Hamilton Chapter, on Wednesday, May 12, 1858. The report of the Committee on Badges was called for, and responded to by E. P. Gardner, of Amherst, chairman of the badge committee. Before reporting, Mr. Gardner introduced the following motion: That each delegate should bind himself to abide by the decision of the majority. Williams Chapter refused to abide by such a resolution, and so the motion was withdrawn.

Mr. Gardner then reported as follows: The majority of the committee (himself and Mr. Bachelder) had decided to adopt a pin as the uniform badge, and they had decided upon the model formed by the two Greek letters, Δ and Υ . Mr. Painter, for the minority, submitted his report, naming the key as the uniform badge. Discussion upon both reports was deferred.

On May 13, at 3 o'clock P.M., the report of the Badge Committee was called for. Mr. Gardner presented the badge, composed of the letters Δ and Υ , and the motto he had selected, Δικαία Ὑποθήκη (Justice our foundation). The Amherst, Waterville, Hamilton, and Rochester delegates declared their intention of voting for the adoption of the report. Williams said it would vote for the adoption of the report if it might be allowed to wear its key as long as it saw fit. The vote was then taken, and the Delta Upsilon badge was declared to be the authorized badge of the Fraternity.

We have deferred mentioning until now the badges worn by the several Chapters previously to the adoption of the Delta Upsilon badge. As we have said, before 1858 the key had practically ceased to be worn, and had been superseded by various badges in the various Chapters. Amherst had adopted a Delta Sigma badge; Hamilton, a Theta Sigma, with Θέμις καὶ σοφία as its motto; and Middlebury, a Zeta Phi. Through the few years these badges were worn, the constitution declared that the key should be the uniform badge of the Fraternity. The key was old-fashioned, unsuited to the needs of the society and to its modified character. It was not then strange that it should be declared that the Delta Upsilon badge would be changed by the Chapters according to their preference or caprice. Its beauty, however, has been its protection. For twenty-six years it has been the badge of our Fraternity. Nine years the key was theoretically our badge. Fifteen years each Chapter regulated its own constitution business and insignia. We have said that the development of the badge is an epitome of the fraternities' history. Its changes represent the unification of the Chapters, the strengthening of the fraternal bond, and an advance to a front position among American fraternities. The day will never come when we shall wish to change our name or insignia. If our society is perpetual, so will be our badge. It will be valued as a precious memento by the graduate of many years, cherished with pride by the active sons of Delta Upsilon, and blessed by the world as an emblem of men tried and true.

MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS.

I.

The first collection of songs published by the Fraternity was in 1866, by a committee of which J. S. Van Alstin, Rochester, N. Y., was chairman. The title-page is as follows:—

"Songs / of the / Delta Upsilon Fraternity, / a design of balances and Δ. Υ. monogram. / A stanza of a song. / Rochester, N.Y.: / Robert Dransfield, Book & Job Printer, 8 State street. / 1866."

Cover is cloth, 4¼ by 6½ inches; 28 printed pages. Contains 23 songs without and 1 with music.

II.

The Board of Editors of the Second Fraternity Song-Book were: Charles W. Foote, Western Reserve, '74; William R. Dudley, Cornell, '74; and P. H. Perkins, Cornell, '75. These editors make special acknowledgment of the assistance of David Hayes, Rochester, '78. This book was a collection of 50 pages of songs, both words and music.

The book was bound in limp covers, was about 5 by 8 inches in size, and contained as frontispiece a full-page monogram of the Fraternity letters. The following is a copy of the title-page:—

Songs / of the / Delta Upsilon / Fraternity / New York: / The Athenæum Publishing House. / 1877. /

III.

There have been a number of collections of songs without the music.

One published by Madison Chapter, an edition of twenty-five songs, in a book 3¼ by 5½ inches in size. E. E. Fagen, Printer, Hamilton, N.Y., 1882; also, a collection of songs for Marietta Chapter, an edition of thirty-four songs (words only) in a book 3¼ by 6 inches in size, 1882.

IV.

Through the efforts of M. R. Sackett, Syracuse, '80, and others, the work of compiling a more complete and representative collection of Delta Upsilon songs was intrusted to a committee consisting of Rochester, Syracuse, and Madison Chapters. No great progress was made until the year 1883, when the editors and the Fraternity at large took vigorous measures for the publication of the Song-Book. These editors were: John C. Carman, Rochester, '84, Chairman; C. F. Sitterly, Syracuse, '83; E. S. Tipple, Syracuse, '84; C. A. Fulton, Madison, '83; and A. J. Truesdell, Madison, '84.

This new collection is called the "Song-Book of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity"; this name, and a beautiful monogram of the Fraternity letters, appearing upon the covers. The book contains 144 pages, 100 pound cream book paper, English cloth binding with bevelled edges. The songs belonging distinctively to Delta Upsilon are given in the body of the book without regard to chapter distinctions; and an appendix contains some of the most popular college songs. An edition of 1,000 copies was issued at a price of $1.50 per volume, the Chapters making pro rata subscriptions covering the cost of publication. The following is a copy of the title-page:—

Song book / of the / Delta Upsilon Fraternity. / Committee of Publication: / Rochester, Syracuse, Madison. / Scranton, Wetmore & Co., / Rochester, N. Y. / 1884. /

In addition to the above, a Delta Upsilon Waltz, and a Mazurka, have been published by David Hays, of Rochester, '78.

WILLIAMS COLLEGE.

Williams College owes its name and origin to Colonel Ephraim Williams, who was killed, in 1755, in the French and Indian War. His will gave the bulk of his property to the foundation of an educational institution in the western part of Massachusetts, in a town to be called Willistonstown.

The institution was chartered as a college in 1787 and Rev. Ebenezer Fitch, D.D., who had been its principal, became its first president. The catalogue of 1795 contains 77 names.

The presidents have been Rev. Zephaniah Swift Moore, 1797-1807; Rev. Edward Dorr Griffin, D.D., 1821-30; Rev. Mark Vinton, D.D., LL.D., 1833-72; Hon. Paul A. Goddard, LL.D., 1873-81; and Franklin Carter, Ph.D., LL.D., 1881.

The funds of the college now exceed $3,000,000. Its financial support of needy students amount to $1,000,000 annually. There are 1,500 students. There are 100,000 volumes in the library, and 100,000 in the geological and zoological collections, and the library is open to the public. It had (1883-84) 20 professors and 124 students.

The students issue three college publications: "The Athenaeum," "Argo," and "Gulacianian."

The following is a list of the different Greek Letter Fraternities presented in Williams College and the date of their establishment: Phi Gamma Upsilon, 1834; Sigma Phi, 1834; Delta Sigma, 1834; Chi Psi, 1842; Zeta Psi, 1848; Alpha Delta Phi, 1851; Delta Psi, 1853; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 1855, and Phi Beta HISTORICAL SKETCH OF WILLIAMS CHAPTER.

By WILLIAM D. PORTER, WILLIAMS, '50.

The Literary Society in Williams College, known as the Adelpic Union, is supposed to have been organized about the year 1794, but the precise date cannot be ascertained. The members soon became so numerous that they could not all be accommodated in the place of meeting; and, consequently, after much deliberation, agreed to a division, which was consummated in the autumn of 1795, the result being the formation of the Philologian and Philotechnian Societies, upon the following basis: the two societies still to be known by the old name of the Adelpic Union; the library to be in common, and in all public exhibitions the two societies to unite and act as one body. This agreement has been in force ever since, excepting that, after a few years, the joint library was divided, and from that time each society has had a library of its own.

The origin of the secret societies in Williams College may be best learned by the following extract from an article, written by the late lamented Professor Albert Hopkins, LL.D., entitled "Narrative of the Revivals of Religion in Williams College," and found on page 471 in vol. 13 of the "Journal of the American Education Society," published at Andover, Mass., in 1834:—

"So far as I have been able to obtain information the origin of these societies among us does not date back beyond the year 1824. At that time there was in town a Masonic Lodge. The students, as a body, were most of them candidates for admission till the revival broke out in 1825. That work seemed to operate as a death-blow to the lodge. The meetings since that period, if held, have been kept secret. Of secret associations afterwards, I know nothing till 1834. At that time I went abroad, and spent several months. On my return, almost if not quite the first morning of entering my room I perceived that a new element had found its way into the atmosphere of the place. I could scarcely compare college to anything but a beehive. Little collections were gathered about, some in college, and some out before the building, engaged in earnest disputation and apparently angry conversation. Among these I was surprised to notice some for whose Christian character I had great charity, and whose uniform sobriety and good temper formerly, led me to suppose that something very uncommon must have occurred.

“My doubts, but not my anxieties, were soon relieved by information that certain societies, termed secret, had been introduced during my absence; and it was ill-feeling, growing out of this circumstance, which gave rise to the excitement I had witnessed. I say not my anxieties, for I readily perceived that the ground of excitement was not ephemeral; that the dissocial element embodied in a regular organization would be likely to incorporate itself into the very bone of our system, and become, if the fruits then witnessed were any criterion to judge by, a perpetual source of gangrene. Some, it appeared, had been elected members of these associations, others, not; some Christians had been elected; others, not. Distinctions were thus created, which gave rise to jealousies, and hard feelings sprang up between those who were professedly Christians and those who were not so. An embodied influence soon collected against the new system, and, for aught I know, had already concentrated itself in a counter-association. These associations, of course, were at war with each other in principle, and not less so in practice; and what went to enhance the evil was the fact that animosities sprang up between the secret societies themselves, these societies becoming, in a sense, rivals to each other. Alienation of feeling grew up so bitter that, for a long time before the revival, it is understood that individuals of the same class, and some of them professors of religion, were not on speaking terms with one another. Under such circumstances there was no room to urge the apostolic exhortation, 'Let brotherly love continue,' nor was it possible to bring about anything like concentrated religious effort. This will serve in part to account for the otherwise inexplicable fact that, amidst all the religious helps here enjoyed, things sank down into a state so low as that which preceded the revival.

"As a chronicler of religious events I am not called upon to speak of the social tendencies of this system, which are sufficiently obvious from the nature of the case. A regard for truth, however, has made it proper and necessary to speak thus far, and this I have been the more willing to do, as the evil complained of exists in sister institutions, from one of which it was introduced here, and is creeping more or less into them all.

"Some conscientious and Christian men, not having examined this system in all its bearings, have given their influence to it, and in the review have had occasion to regret this, and have expressed their regrets. It is but right that those who wish to live godly in Christ should be cautioned. Parents, too, had been informed that this system was of no injurious tendency. It is but right that such should know the opinion of those who may be reasonably supposed to know more than their children can, of tendencies and results."

In order to counteract the undesirable influences of the secret societies, as set forth so clearly in the preceding article by Professor Hopkins, an anti-secret society, consisting of thirty members (there being ten from each of the three lower classes), was formed on the evening of November 4, 1834, in the freshman recitation-room, on the second floor of the old West College, and the name Social Fraternity adopted, and the same retained for many years afterwards.

The new society met at first with great opposition, and even ridicule, from all the secret societies; but, being founded upon principles which appeal to the higher and nobler nature of man, quietly pursued the even tenor of its way, not only holding its own, but steadily increasing in strength and influence, so that, in the second year of its existence, twenty-eight were added to its numbers, mostly from the moral and religious students, and in 1838 the membership was eighty-two, — nearly two-thirds of all the students in college; the soundness of its avowed principles and moral character of its members being the chief cause of success.

The first president of the society was Dr. A. L. Hobart, of the class of 1836, still living, and practising his profession in the city of Worcester, Mass., while another of the founders, and ever a warm friend of the organization, was ex-Lieutenant-Governor William Bross, of the class of 1838, still residing in Chicago, Illinois.

The badge adopted by the society, and the model of which was the suggestion of Charles G. Hazeltine, of the class of 1839, was a square gold key, with the words Social Fraternity upon one side and on the reverse, the motto Ὅυδέν Ἐδηλον (Nothing secret).

The preamble to the Constitution of the society was mainly the work of Edward P. Hawkes, of the class of 1838; and its great importance, the fact that it remains essentially the same to this day, and has been the basis of similar societies in sister colleges, makes it peculiarly fitting that it should be here inserted entire, as follows: —

“Believing that secret societies are calculated to destroy the harmony of college, to create distinction not founded on merit, and to produce strife and animosity, we feel called upon to exert ourselves to counteract the evil tendency of such associations.

“We believe that the evils resulting from them are such as can be suppressed only by action combined with principle.

“We would invest no class of our fellow-students with facti-tious advantages, but would place all upon an equal footing in running the race of honorable distinction.

“The only superiority which we acknowledge is the superiority of merit.

“We, therefore, members of Williams College, believing that voluntary associations, if properly conducted, exert a mighty influence in the correction of evil, do agree to form ourselves into a society for the purpose of counteracting the evil tendency of secret associations; for maintaining and diffusing liberal principles; and for promoting the great objects of social and literary improvement.

“In doing this we are confident that we have at heart the best interests of the institution to which we belong, and that we are directed by the light of experience, the suggestions of reason, and the dictates of conscience.

“This society shall not recognize society divisions, but real merit in college elections.”

The first catalogue of the society was published in 1837, but the book containing all its records, from the date of organization until 1840, was destroyed by fire at the time of the burning of the old East College; so that the history of the society, during these early years, is not so complete as desired.

In 1838 a society similar in its principles to the Social Fraternity, and called the Equitable Union, was organized in Union College, at Schenectady, N.Y., and in 1840 considerable effort was made in both institutions to unite the two associations under a common name, provided a satisfactory plan of union could be agreed upon; but, after much discussion and consideration, the matter was finally dropped until 1847, when, in consequence of the subsequent formation of anti-secret societies in both Amherst and Hamilton Colleges, as well as in Union, similar in spirit to the Social Fraternity, a convention of delegates from each of the four societies was held in Troy, N.Y., November 10, 1847, and a plan of union agreed upon, the generic name adopted of Anti-Secret Confederation, and a catalogue published containing the Constitution and By-Laws, with a list of all the members in the four institutions. This united action gave new strength and influence to the cause, and led in time to the formation of similar societies in several other colleges.

During the years 1848 and 1849 a large number of the students who entered college were nominated and elected members of the Social Fraternity, almost upon their arrival, and before they had time to acquaint themselves with the principles of the society; and many of these same students, being merely nominal members, soon after would ask for dismissal, and thus really prove a source of weakness instead of strength, so that, on July 1, 1850, a motion, greatly needed, was unanimously passed (which has been most wise and happy in its results ever since), that, "as principles were more important than numbers, no person should ever be admitted into the society, in future, unless he had been a member of college for at least four weeks, and found time to inform himself concerning the design, principles, and operations of the society."

On July 10, 1851, a convention was held at Union College of delegates from all the societies at that time members of the Anti-Secret Confederation, and an effort made to agree upon a uniform badge, and have the name of Equitable Fraternity adopted by all the organizations; but the plan was not favored by a majority of those present, although the parent society at Williams, did subsequently adopt the name of Equitable Fraternity, and retained the same for a long time afterward.

Another meeting of the Anti-Secret Confederation was held in Burlington, Vermont, on October 13, 1852, which discussed at length the principles and manner of work carried on by each branch in its own college, the apparent effects of the same, and how to become more efficient in the future; which gathering aided much in binding the several organizations more firmly than ever in one common bond.

The second catalogue of the Confederation was issued in October, 1853, and in 1854 the society at Amherst prepared with much care, and sent to each branch in the Confederation, a printed circular for general distribution, giving the opinions of many distinguished individuals respecting the baneful influence of secret societies in college, and in 1855 a circular of similar import was issued by the Confederation.

In 1854 the association in the University of Vermont, at Burlington, for some reason never given or understood, withdrew from the Confederation.

On October 30, 1855, the society unanimously resolved to increase the literary interest and influence of the exercises at the regular meetings, by adding to the customary debates, orations, and criticisms; essays upon art, science, antiquities, history, poetry, and general literature, which action proved decidedly beneficial in the higher intellectual standard thenceforth required of its members.

In November, 1855, the members of two of the secret societies in college challenged the members of the Equitable Fraternity to an open and public discussion of the principles and influence of the latter society, claiming that it was both uncalled for and inefficient. The terms of mutual agreement upon which the discussion was to be carried forward were drawn up and signed by all the parties on both sides, a neutral from the senior class chosen as moderator to decide all points of order, and a committee of three selected by the Equitable Fraternity to defend their side of the question. One member of this committee was the late loved and lamented President James A. Garfield, who joined the society soon after he entered college, and was ever its warm friend and supporter.

The discussion was agreed upon for January 19, 1856, and arrangements made accordingly; but, just before that time, two of the committee, who had promised to defend the secret society system, suddenly announced their intention of withdrawing from the contest, giving as reasons, "want of time to do justice to the subject, incurring personal odium, making an excitement in college, doing no good," etc. The Equitable Fraternity strongly urged the obligation of abiding by the agreement, since the challenge came from the secret societies themselves, and on their pledged word to openly discuss the matter, much time and labor had been spent by the committee of the Fraternity in preparing for the debate; but two of the secret society champions absolutely refused to have anything more to do with the matter, and, although they were then granted three weeks' additional time in which to procure substitutes, replied that they had no hopes of obtaining them; and thus ended the proposed public contest, in which darkness evidently feared to meet the light; but the result was most excellent, in confirming the belief of the members of the association more firmly than ever in those principles upon which the society was founded and maintained, and in bringing the society itself into greater prominence than before.

In 1858 considerable feeling was caused in the society by the fact coming to light that certain of its members had been engaged in private electioneering without regard to merit; and, after earnest discussion of the matter, the following preamble and resolution were unanimously passed:—

Whereas, we have reason to believe that there has been a violation of the principles of our Constitution in reference to college elections:

Therefore resolved, That as a society we do heartily condemn such conduct, and request a strict conformity to those principles in future.

Such prompt and hearty disavowal of a course of conduct opposed to the very spirit of the Constitution was most honorable to the society (and this the more because reflecting upon some of its own members), and proved that principles were ever considered of paramount importance, while personal self-seeking was a dangerous quicksand, to be carefully and persistently avoided.

In 1861 there was a large number of neutrals in college, who combined in joint action with the determination to prevent (by the force of numbers, if in no other way) any society or societies from obtaining a majority of college honors ; and, as their line of effort was almost identical in some respects with that of skilful wire-pullers in great political parties at the present day, the prediction was confidently and publicly asserted that the Equitable Fraternity would be swept out of existence unless it changed its creed and conformed both to the principles and practices of the neutrals. But during all the storm the society steadily maintained its ground, and, disregarding alike both threats and flattery, continued to support for all offices and college honors, secret or anti-secret men alike, according as the claims of justice or needs of the hour seemed to demand ; so that even the most pronounced opponents of the principles of the society could not call in question the unwavering adherence to them of its own members, and the very ordeal through which it then passed only strengthened the roots of the good old Banyan Tree, while, on the other hand, the neutrals soon joined hands, and formed alliances with the secret societies themselves, in those cases where it seemed for their own interest so to do, and whenever, through such union, there was any probability of controlling elections. But before long the neutrals split up into rival factions, and in time became thoroughly disorganized ; as is ordinarily the common fate of all similar factions not founded upon the great underlying principles of justice and truth.

In May, 1862, a meeting of the Anti-Secret Confederation was held in Schenectady, New York, ten of the colleges being represented ; and, after a very protracted and earnest conference, the Williams society asked for a release from the Confederation, on the ground that some of the sister societies had not acted in connection with elections in their own colleges in accordance with the principles of our Constitution, so that the Williams branch, being the parent society, became, in a certain sense, partners in the transactions, thus tending to cripple their own influence in some quarters. Subsequent and careful examination of the matter, however, made it evident that there had been misunderstandings on both sides, and that such request for withdrawal was neither necessary nor wise; but the very nature and ground of the request proved conclusively, how fearful the members of the society were to avoid even the smell of fire upon their garments.

Truthfulness requires the statement at this point that for twenty years, from October 6, 1863, to October 12, 1883, the society became inactive, for reasons that have never been fully explained or understood; but it was reestablished at that date by representatives from both Union and Hamilton Colleges, also the Albany Law School. Eight students joined at that time, and the number has been steadily increasing ever since. The society took the name and has been known since then as the Williams Chapter of the Delta Upsilon (Δικαία Ὑποθήκη — JUSTICE OUR FOUNDATION), being the common title of all the associations formerly known as the Anti-Secret Confederation; and, having secured a desirable place in which to meet, their present prospects are most encouraging for maintaining, as they do to-day, the very principles emblazoned upon the banner half a century ago, and seeking for no new accession to their numbers save those who thoroughly believe in the principles so clearly set forth. The society has already won the respect of all true men now in college, and will command still higher esteem as the years roll along, for we believe the day will come when, in all our literary institutions, it will surely be found that if secret societies are beneficial in any respect, it is in spite of, and not resulting from, their secrecy, and when men love darkness rather than light there is at least a possibility that their deeds may be evil.

The preceding statement, giving the history of the parent society of the Delta Upsilon in Williams College, from its formation in 1834 down to the present time, we hope will be found useful for future reference, and kindle anew in the hearts of old members, fresh interest in the organization, and lead them, in days to come, to both devise and execute means to increase its usefulness and so perpetuate its influence for the benefit of coming generations.

To very carefully examine the record of every meeting of the society held during half a century, cull out whatever seemed essential to a complete and impartial history, eliminate all unnecessary facts, and then condense the whole into a given space; has taken much time, thought, and patience; but if the result, as here presented, can recall any pleasing reminiscences, give pleasure to those members of the society who may read it in days to come, or aid in the least degree to strengthen those principles in which we have an unshaken faith, then the writer will be amply repaid, for with him it has surely been a labor of love.

UNION COLLEGE.

Union College is in Schenectady, N. Y. In 1779 the inhabitants of the region lying north of the Mohawk river petitioned the Legislature for the incorporation of a college, but without success. In 1782 and in 1791 the petition was renewed, and again failed; but in 1793 an act of incorporation was secured for Schenectady Academy, which became the first stone in the foundation of a college. Subscriptions for an endowment fund were readily found, and, through the influence of Gen. Philip Schuyler, who had been a liberal contributor, the location was fixed at Schenectady. On Feb. 25, 1795, the college was incorporated, and is accordingly now in its ninetieth year. It received its name from the coöperation of several religious denominations in its organization, and its non-sectarian character has ever been apparent. In 1805, 1814, and 1822, its funds were largely augmented through lotteries. From its first location in the centre of the town the institution was removed, in 1814, to its present site, on an eminence east of the city, yet no longer out of it.

In the year 1880-81 the number of instructors was 29; and of students, 234. In the Law Department, in Albany, there were 54 students; and in the Medical Department, in Albany, there were 176 students.

The following is a list of the Greek Letter Fraternities represented at Union College, with the date of the establishment of the Chapters: Kappa Alpha, 1825; Sigma Phi, 1827; Delta Phi, 1827; Psi Upsilon, 1833; Delta Upsilon, 1838; Alpha Delta Phi, 1859; Theta Nu Epsilon, 1873; Beta Theta Pi, 1881, and Phi Beta Kappa.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF UNION CHAPTER.

BY ROBERT J. LANDON, UNION, '80.

This Chapter was founded in the winter of 1837-38, as an independent anti-secret organization, with Οὐδέν' Ἀδελόν as the motto, Equitable Union as the title, and a monogram of the letters Alpha and Omicron as the badge.

There were at that time several secret and literary societies in college. The whole number of students, according to the catalogue, was three hundred and one. The secret societies managed the distribution of offices in the classes and in the literary societies, the latter being especially prized. The desire to stand on an equal footing with them in this respect, and to combat their social influence, culminated in the organization of the A. O. society. It represented a popular assertion of those rights of which a man acting independent of others is sure to be deprived. It formed an emphatic protest against that element which renders obnoxious to many the otherwise attractive societies of a college. It was an endeavor to make student life better and purer. Respectability and opposition to secrecy were its chief requirements. One hundred and three men joined during the first year.

The meetings were held in the large college rooms in the chapel in West College, down in the city, and now used as a public school; also in the chapel on the third floor of Dr. Nott's residence in South College. These meetings, held weekly, were often in the nature of mass meetings, attended by any who wished. A paper was occasionally read and questions discussed. The comparative importance of secret and anti-secret societies was there debated by representatives of the two parties, with what result we are not informed.

The secret societies, after some three years' resistance, recognized the right of others to share the college honors; well-sustained literary societies, with rooms and libraries at their command, afforded all necessary opportunities to the disputations; and under these circumstances the usefulness of A. O. became less apparent, and it was allowed to fall to pieces.

During this brief period of its existence the society issued but one publication, the "Spy-Glass," the frontispiece of which shows, in a measure, their estimation of the secret societies. It represented a man at a window with a spy-glass, observing some reeling fellows returning from their resorts in the city; the execution of the cut being such that several of the men were readily identified.

In 1845 a reorganization was found necessary, and effected under conditions similar to those of which before it was the outgrowth. There were, in the fall of 1845, two hundred and forty-nine men in college, of whom one hundred and six were seniors and nineteen freshmen; six secret societies, with a membership of one hundred and twenty-seven, and the A. O. society, with sixty members. The meetings were held, as before, in the large rooms of the college, and were of a literary character.

In 1847 a college catalogue and register of societies was published by the secret societies, in which A. O. was omitted. A. O. therefore published a similar catalogue, giving the literary societies. A note was appended, advising students to join one of the literary societies, adding that secret societies were forbidden by the laws of the institution. In 1850 an attack was made by A. O. in a tract entitled "Secret Societies in College," which was followed by a "Review" of the same by the secret societies, and this in turn by a "Review of the Review."

The spirit which inspired the society at its foundation and reorganization, as well as during a number of years thereafter, is well indicated by two clauses of the preamble to the constitution which was adopted in 1847: "Believing that secret societies are calculated to destroy the harmony of college, to create distinctions not founded on merit, to produce strife and animosity, we feel called upon to exert ourselves to counteract the evil tendency of such associations." "We would have no class of our fellow-students invested with factitious advantages, but would place all upon an equal footing in running the race of honorable distinction." Notwithstanding this antagonistic groundwork, the relations of the society with the secret societies were not unpleasant. Friendships grew up between individuals, which tended to dissuade them from hostilities, except, perhaps, on election days; and even then combinations were occasionally made whereby secret and anti-secret men supported the same ticket. A desire to have their own share of college distinctions, and a readiness to fight, if occasion called for it, trusting in the rectitude of their principles, seem to have been the characteristics of the society for some years.

On July 10, 1851, a convention met at Givens' Hotel, in Schenectady, when the anti-secret societies of Williams, Union, Amherst, Hamilton, Western Reserve, and Middletown Colleges, and of Vermont University, revised the articles of confederation, preamble and constitution, adopted in 1847 at Troy, reiterating the extracts we have quoted. One section of the constitution is worthy of commendation, though it was not always followed unless on the assumption that it had been enforced at the caucus. It is: "This society shall not recognize society divisions, but real merit, in college elections." The active opposition gradually became less demonstrative, no publication of which we are aware having been issued against secret societies since 1850. They were content to weaken their opponents by gaining over the best men and making themselves respected.

A key badge, somewhat like the Φ. Β. Κ. key, was adopted about 1850. In 1856-7 the society secured the first room it ever had exclusively for society purposes. It was in the upper part of the large block at the foot of College Hill, a part of which was occupied as a residence by the late Dr. Tayler Lewis. In their new quarters the society become more exclusive, admitting visitors only on invitation, whereas before their meetings were open to any wishing to attend. Here the social element was allowed greater scope than was before possible. These rooms were retained, we think, till the society became extinct, which occurred with the graduation of the class of '63. There were in college in 1862-3, eight secret societies, with one hundred and seven members, besides four literary organizations, the whole number of students being two hundred and fifty-eight. A. Y. had fourteen members. Why it then became extinct we have not yet been able to definitely ascertain.

The change from A. O. to A. Y. was made in 1861, with Δικαία Υποθήκη as a motto, the badge being similar to the one now used.

A reorganization of the society was effected, in 1869, through the agency of Henry R. Waite, of Hamilton, '68. The badge was the same as at present; the mottoes were Δικαία Υποθήκη and Ἄδελφον, the latter being afterward dropped. There were in 1869 nine secret societies, with a membership of seventy-three, besides four literary organizations, with a membership of one hundred and forty-five; the whole number of students being one hundred and sixty-four. The meetings were at first held in Theological Hall, North College; afterwards, and till some time in 1875, a room in Union Hall was used on Friday evenings. In 1876 rooms on Quackenbush street were taken and kept open every evening; in 1877 rooms were taken in the building west of the Mohawk Bank, where the society remained till the fall of 1879, when it moved to its present location. The Fraternity convention met with Union that fall, and gratified the Chapter by its unanimous approval of the new quarters.

There have been occasional ruptures since 1869 in the generally friendly relations existing between A. Y. and the secret societies.

Considerable feeling, and even great bitterness, has been exhibited at times ; but the lapse of a brief period has usually restored good feeling.

There are now, February, 1884, one hundred and sixty-two students in college ; three literary societies, with a membership of one hundred and five ; seven secret societies, with seventy members, and J. Y. with fourteen. The society had members in every class from 1839 to 1865, inclusive ; the greatest number in any one class being fifty-two in the class of '40, while the classes of '45 and '64 were represented by but one man each. The total membership for this period is four hundred and twenty-nine, or an average of about sixteen to each class. The freshmen classes under Dr. Nott's regime were always much smaller than the senior, sometimes amounting to almost none at all ; as, for instance, in 1852 there were one hundred and eight seniors, and only six freshmen. This rule has been reversed under the present management, a class graduating but from one-third to one-half of its members. The membership of the society from 1869 to 1884, inclusive, averages not quite five to a class, there being seventy-eight in all. There have been no publications by the Chapter during this latter period except the Fraternity Constitution and Annual of the forty-fifth convention, both published in 1879.

We have given from the resources at our command a cursory sketch of the Union Chapter. We believe that it was called into existence to redress real grievances in college life. That it accomplished its purpose to some extent we do not doubt ; but that at its origin, and for many years thereafter, it committed a great error we likewise feel assured. An attack was made on secrecy as the great source of evils, to eradicate which was the purpose of this society. Herein lay the error. It attributed to a principle that which, independent of any principle or set of principles, must exist where young men, assembled for educational advancement, separate in congenial bodies for secondary purposes. Continual intercourse will develop friendships, and friends stand by friends while the test is not very strong. The secret societies, with their social opportunities, threw men more together, and with less reserve, than could be the case in the class-room and on the floor of debate in the literary societies, besides being a kind of intangible something in which they had a common interest. The result was inevitable. The social spirits would be too convivial where none but friendly eyes kept watch over them. The ambitious saw an opportunity to profit by their organization in the race for honors at the hands of their classmates, and embraced it. The disunited, unorganized, non-society men were necessarily at a disadvantage, and this disadvantage was attributed by them to the element of secrecy in societies. Offspring were ascribed to secrecy of which it was not the parent. All things pertaining to secret societies were, in their eyes, fatally tainted. They would banish secrecy, and with it all that was beneficial in the secret societies.

The right way, in our opinion, would have been to have offered a substitute which, without the element of secrecy, retained what was good. Those who are socially inclined, whose nature is such that they must have companions with whom they may be intimate and unreserved, and who would like an assurance that their friendship is to be of some duration, could then lose nothing by declaring themselves against secrecy. Most young men care nothing for secrecy or anti-secrecy in the abstract; it is the other things, of which they feel the need, together, perhaps, with a boyish wish to know what the secrets are, that induce them to join the secret societies. A man more matured than the average undergraduate may have settled the question to his own satisfaction; he may reject secrecy and everything connected with it; or he may decide to endure it in consideration of other advantages; or he may believe that these advantages may be secured without secrecy.

The originators of A. O. and its subsequent leaders held the first position for many years. About 1856-7 the last position began to be taken. It is the position A. Y. holds to-day, — what is popularly called non-secrecy. It is, we believe, the correct one.

A man may be anti-secret in principle without abusing those holding opposite principles. Occasions may, of course, arise when anti means fight. It is then that sound judgment and adherence to the motto, Δικαία Ἰποδίκη, will bring Δ. Υ. through triumphant.

HAMILTON COLLEGE.

The location of Hamilton College is in Clinton village, Kirkland township, Oneida county, N. Y., nine miles south of Utica. Its origin is due to the generosity of the Rev. Samuel Kirkland, a missionary for more than forty years among the Oneida Indians, who, in 1793, secured the incorporation of the "Hamilton Oneida Academy," and became its first pocket benefactor, by the gift of several hundred acres of land. This institution prospered for eighteen years, and, as "the child is father to the man," became the parent of Hamilton College, which, by an act of the Legislature, received incorporation in 1812. Escaping some periods of depression, during the years from 1820 to 1833, Hamilton has grown strong, and is at present largely endowed. The college is now seventy-two years old. In the year 1883-84 there were 13 instructors and 205 students.

The illustrated annual is called the "Hamiltonian."

The following is a list of the Greek Letter Fraternities represented in Hamilton College, and the date of the establishment of the Chapters: Sigma Phi, 1832; Alpha Delta Phi, 1832; Psi Upsilon, 1843; Chi Psi, 1845; Delta Upsilon, 1847; Delta Kappa Upsilon, 1856; Theta Delta Phi, 1867, and Phi Beta Kappa.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF HAMILTON CHAPTER.

BY HENRY RANDALL WAITE, Ph.D., F.A.S.A., HAMILTON, '68.

If it may be said of any institution that it represents a principle, such an affirmation is unquestionably true of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, as amply attested by its history and achievements, and as evidenced in the character of the men who have been enrolled among its members. A complete history of the Fraternity, from its origin in the scattering elements in the various colleges from which it was formed, when written, will show that, of these elements, none had a more distinctive part in giving it a substantial foundation, shaping its character, and establishing the principles which have contributed to its success, than the Hamilton Chapter. It may be said, therefore, that the history of this Chapter, interlinked, as it is, with all that relates to the Fraternity in all of its parts, must necessarily constitute one of the most important portions of the Fraternity's history. The organization of the Chapter at Hamilton, in common with the Chapters at Williams, Amherst, and Union, — due to influences of like origin, — was the outcome of the manly spirit engendered by our free institutions and our American home teaching, something which is never absent where any considerable body of intelligent young men are gathered for any purpose, and which leads to a preference for that which is essentially elevating and ennobling as compared with that which is directly or indirectly the reverse. The open societies, in which the Delta Upsilon Fraternity had its origin, grew up in opposition to the secret college organizations which, from their infancy until now, whatever may be said of individual Chapters of the various Fraternities, have always had a tendency, either because of their secrecy or because of the absence of well-defined principles as the basis of their organization, to develop in their members qualities and habits the reverse of those which must be depended upon as the foundation for true manliness and high character aside from all questions of scholarship and fitness for the responsibilities of the future. In those early days at Hamilton, as elsewhere, in the conflict between these college elements, — as is usually true when youthful minds, undisciplined by the experiences of life, are arrayed in opposition, — exaggerated views were entertained, personal enmity was engendered, and in the warmth of partisan feeling it was difficult for the elements in opposition to entertain opinions relating to each other which were not in some degree, and often largely, tinged with injustice.

In reviewing those days of strife, in an atmosphere free from prejudice, it is but just that the facts as to the elements then in conflict be set in their proper relation. To do this requires an acknowledgment of the truth that the college elements, against which the anti-secret men were arrayed, were not altogether given over to the works of darkness, or in league with all evil; and that the open-society men were not the poor and pretentiously pious malcontents and meddlers which the ex-parte testimony of those days would seem to indicate. In a fair comparison of the two elements the secret societies are seen to have possessed then, as now, members conspicuous for scholarship and manliness; while among the anti-secret men were those who were actuated, as to-day, by the noblest of motives, and who stood in the front rank as students and true men. If any error can, at this distance, be safely attributed to the latter element, it was in waging war too much upon the narrow ground of mere secrecy and anti-secrecy, instead of upon the broader one afforded by the principles actually involved; and this error seems to have been recognized in later times, as shown by the fact that less emphasis is now placed upon the two facts referred to, and more upon the principles in issue, than at any other time in the history of the Fraternity. It is, in fact, upon these principles, that the continued life and prosperity of the Fraternity has rested in the past, as it is upon these that it must rest in the future. The foundations of the Fraternity were laid by men who believed that a college society in which young men were brought into the most intimate companionship, and under circumstances where the influence of one upon the other, for good or for evil, must inevitably be decided and permanent, should have a definite purpose aside from mere social enjoyment; and that that purpose should be the establishment of safeguards by which the integrity of its members should be preserved, and, so far as possible, their moral and intellectual advancement secured. For the attainment of these purposes, without losing sight of the social needs of members in the way of delightful and wholesome fellowship, the members of Delta Upsilon, from the first, at Hamilton, as in all other Chapters, have pledged themselves to the use of their best efforts; and with honorable pride it may be affirmed that only in rare instances have these pledges been violated by those who were unwilling to maintain the standard of life and scholarship required, and whose delinquencies have been almost invariably punished by expulsion.

The direct origin of the Hamilton Chapter is traced to a meeting held on the evening of July 21, 1847, at the room of C. L. Adams, then a senior and member of the class of '47. At this memorable meeting, which was the result of various preliminary conferences, there were present, beside Mr. Adams, who presided, Augustus G. Gould, class of '48; Richard G. Keyes, class of '48; Milton Waldo, class of '48; David E. Blaine, class of '49; John Campbell, class of '49; Yates Hickey, class of '49; Ellison Robbins, class of '49; George Rumney, class of '49; and Alfred M. Stowe, class of '49; who was secretary. The major part of the first resolution adopted, significant of the character of these gentlemen and of the future of the organization then founded, was that "The condition of membership, if we form an anti-secret association, be pure moral character." The name then adopted was "The Social Fraternity of Hamilton College," and its badge was that worn by the same Fraternity at Williams College, whose constitution was adopted as the basis of that of the new society. The formal organization was effected in the room of A. M. Stowe, on the evening of Sept. 7, at which time Milton Waldo was made president; Richard G. Keyes, vice-president; Alfred M. Stowe, secretary; Yates Hickey, corresponding secretary; Augustus G. Gould and Stewart Sheldon, class of '48, critics; and Hiram E. Johnson, class of '49, reader. Various names were added at this and subsequent meetings, which were held in the rooms of the different members. A correspondence was carried on with organizations of like character in other colleges, with a view to coöperation; and as early as October 14 we find mention of a letter from the Equitable Union, of Union College, expressing sympathy with the new undertaking, and record of a motion instructing the corresponding secretary to communicate with the different anti-secret societies of other colleges with regard to the expediency of publishing a union catalogue and adopting a common constitution. October 27, as the result of this correspondence, the society voted to send a delegate to an anti-secret convention to be held in Troy. January 6, 1848, the corresponding secretary was instructed to confer with other societies in relation to a common name and badge.

At this time the question of a badge seems to have been a prominent one, and among the various designs proposed and considered were the key, recommended by Union, and the harp, recommended by the Delta Sigma of Amherst College. The question of the united convention was again proposed on April 3, 1848, and delegates were appointed to attend an anti-secret confederation, to meet May 3 of that year at the Delavan House, in Albany. May 23 a vote was taken, which resulted in favor of the key as a badge, and June 1 it is recorded that Williams College had forwarded the model of a badge to be received, remodelled, or rejected by this society, and mention is at the same time made of two letters from Amherst and Union on the same subject. June 8, 1848, the badge discussion continued, with a motion to adopt the letters Theta Phi, which was lost. October 5 of the same year the Fraternity expressed its preference for a model of an English letter badge, which the secretary was instructed to submit for the approval of other members of the confederation, which then included Williams, Union, Amherst, and Hamilton Chapters. October 19 a letter from the Williams Chapter was received, expressing a preference for the letters Theta Phi. November 10 the society bound itself to accept any badge agreed upon by a majority of the members of the Confederation with the exception of the letters Delta Sigma and Delta Psi. It was at the same time decided to prepare an improved model of the key, which was to be commended to the choice of other societies, the key, thus seeming to have the preference. June 23, 1849, a committee on permanent rooms was appointed, prior to which the society seems to have met in private rooms.

In these early days the society seems to have met after at Mrs. Powell's the mother of two worthy members of the Chapter. Her house was the head-quarters of the Chapter, and she has often been called its mother. In July of the same year we find the members voting bookcases, carpets, cabinet work, and other furnishings, for the new room, which had been granted them in South College, South Hall, fourth floor, which was dedicated November 22, taken possession of at that time, and continued to be the home of the Fraternity from that date until 1874.

In the year 1882 a movement was inaugurated to secure for the Chapter a commodious hall. Progress has been comparatively slow, yet the Chapter has reason to congratulate itself upon the liberality of the Alumni, and the success of the movement seems assured. An eligible site has already been secured, and it is hoped that before long the much-desired hall may be erected.

The history of the Fraternity indicates not only the fact of uniform and earnest adherence to its principles on the part of its members, but shows, also, the important position which the Chapter has occupied in its relation to other Chapters. Its members, from its foundation, are recorded as zealously engaged in efforts to establish its principles in other colleges, and in the councils of the Fraternity no Chapter has assumed a more prominent, influential, or honorable place. When the Williams, Union, and Amherst Chapters lost the prestige of their early strength, and finally ceased to exist, the Hamilton Chapter became naturally a leader in the Fraternity, — a position which it maintained greatly to its credit until the establishment of new and flourishing Chapters, and the general prosperity of the Fraternity, made the prominence of any one Chapter unnecessary, and placed all once more upon an equal footing. It was through the efforts of a Hamilton member of Delta Upsilon, acting by authority of the Chapter, that the Chapter at Union College was reorganized, the flourishing Gamma Nu Society at Brown University brought into fellowship, and a work initiated which afterward resulted in the reorganization of the Chapter at Amherst. To the zeal of the Hamilton members is also due the establishment of Chapters at the University at New York, Trinity College, and the University of Syracuse. In fact, every Chapter that was organized, or reorganized between 1848 and 1868 owes much to the efforts of the Hamilton Chapter. In view of the loyalty of the members of this Chapter to the principles which they were pledged to sustain, it is not surprising that the Chapter should have held, at all times, an honorable position among other societies, in spite of the differences between them, resulting at times in great bitterness, or that its members should have maintained high rank as students, and so many of them gained highly honorable positions in the world. A fair proportion of college honors has always fallen to the lot of Delta Upsilon, and the recognition of the larger world, into which her members have graduated, aside from those who have been notably honored, has been equally generous and satisfactory. The college records show that, with seven rival societies, Delta Upsilon has obtained at least one-fifth of the college honors and prizes. Among her sons who have distinguished themselves, without intention to be invidious, may be mentioned Hon. C. S. B. Sawyer, Judge of the California Supreme Court; Dr. D. J. Pratt, Sec'y of N. Y. State Regents University; Rev. D. L. Kiehle, State Supt. of Public Instruction in Minnesota; Hon. E. A. Hamlin, late Democratic nominee for Governor of Minnesota, and Rev. A. T. Pierson, D.D., of Bethany Church, Philadelphia, Pa.; Samuel Darwin Wilcox (deceased), Prof. of Rhetoric and Belles Lettres, Hamilton College; Hon. C. E. Rice, Judge of the Superior Court, Pa.; Hon. Francis Marion Burdick, ex-Mayor of Utica, and Maynard Professor of Law, Hamilton College; J. J. Porter, Director Astronomical Observatory, Cincinnati.

To-day the Fraternity not only looks back upon a career of which its members have every reason to be in the highest degree proud, but finds itself in the midst of a successful career, with every promise of its long continuance.

In concluding this outline of the history of the Hamilton Chapter, as an individual member of the Chapter and the Fraternity, and at the same time, I believe, as expressing the sentiment of every other member, I wish to place on record my own tribute to the value of the Society in its influence upon the mind and morals of its members, which has been justly set forth in the claim which its whole history justifies, — that no man ever became and remained a loyal member of Delta Upsilon who did not graduate from college as pure in morals and with as high a standard of life and conduct before him as when he entered. When to this claim is added the fact that many have been led into better ways of living and thinking, and have gone from college life into the wider life of the world with higher standards of life and duty as the result of the fellowship enjoined in Delta Upsilon, we have awarded to the Fraternity its highest meed of praise, and in words, whose truth will be warmly attended by a host of her still loyal and faithful sons, occupying places of honor and usefulness in all parts of the land.

AMHERST COLLEGE.

Amherst College takes its name from the town in Hampshire County, Massachusetts, in which it is located. The village has grown chiefly to accommodate the institution. The college was founded in 1821. Its projectors had prominently in view the gratuitous education of pious young men for the ministry, and for this purpose the charity fund has grown to large proportions. The managers had to struggle against many discouragements at the outset, and not a dollar was appropriated in its aid from the State treasury during the first twenty-five years of its existence. In later years, however, both public and private munificence has been accorded it. A large proportion of its graduates have entered the Christian ministry. Amherst College is sixty-three years old. In the year 1883-84 there were twenty-eight instructors and three hundred and twenty-one students.

The illustrated college annual is called the Olio.

The Greek Letter Fraternities represented in Amherst College, and the dates of the establishment of the chapters, are: Alpha Delta Phi, 1836; Psi Upsilon, 1841; Delta Upsilon, 1847; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 1848; Chi Psi, 1864; Chi Phi, 1873; Beta Theta Pi, 1883; and Phi Beta Kappa.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF AMHERST CHAPTER.

BY GEORGE E. HOOKER, AMHERST, '83.

The parent of Delta Upsilon in Amherst College was a body of half a dozen men from the class of 1848, who, in the summer term of their junior year, associated themselves together for the purpose of concerted action against secrecy. Within a month, and thus before the organization could become developed as a local society, it was constituted a chapter of the Anti-Secret Fraternity, just then rising into general prominence, and counting chapters at Williams, Union, and Hamilton. The charter members were Brothers Miller, Peabody, Gaylord, Fobes, Case, Severance, and Pratt.

Once ready for practical operation difficulties arose. Two ideas contended: one for an anti-secret campaign, and that, too, not only in but out of college, the other for literary and social culture. These two purposes, however, were brought into unison by a compromise in accordance with which both should be prosecuted, though anti-secrecy was not nominally to be extended beyond college. Thus became defined the twofold aim of the chapter,—moral and literary.

The name and insignia were not the same then as now. The Amherst Chapter was organized under the title $\Delta. \Sigma.$ (for $\Delta\iota\chi\alpha\iota\acute{\alpha}$ $\Sigma\upsilon\nu\alpha\phi\acute{\epsilon}\rho\eta$). In 1848 the Fraternity styled itself the Anti-Secret Confederation; and, soon after, a badge in the form of a key was adopted by Amherst and most of the chapters. The Fraternity retained this designation, and Amherst this name and badge, until they were superseded in 1858 by the present name and pin.

Accommodation for the meetings was, of course, at the beginning, temporary. First, a private room in South College; then, in convenient and well arranged, in the autumn of 1850, that north-west corner of the college, which was fitted up exclusively to cluster so many intimate associations in the persons of the Chapter. What was nothing but a temporary success, both as a literary society and as a principle, marked the Chapter's stay here. The number increased from a half dozen at first to an average of more than a dozen in a delegation. Moreover, this number included a proportion of the best of the college, and many of the honor students, for example, in one class the valedictorian, salutatorian, and the author of the philosophical oration.

The most characteristic feature of the Chapter was, of course, its relation to the secret societies. This relation was in no sense ambiguous. The anti-secret position was pronounced, the Chapter giving expression to its principles most forcibly, of course, by simple example, but also by published resolutions, petitions, discussions, etc. On the other hand, the reciprocal attitude of the secret societies was equally unequivocal, though the spirit of bitterness and petty warfare that has existed between the corresponding elements in some colleges never prevailed there.

A fatal disaster, however, occurred in 1857, when the hall was destroyed by the burning of North College. The Chapter never recovered; but, after a speedy decline, disbanded in 1860. Such a misfortune seems hardly to suggest such consequences. But there were potent reasons for the result. First, there was no outside support. The arm of the general Fraternity was weak in those early days, while the Chapter itself, only completing its first decade, lacked both the stimulus and confidence inspired by a long and well-tried history, and still more the backing of a numerous list of united and active alumni. But the deepest reason probably lies in the very fact of previous prosperity. New members had been readily secured, and success in general had been easy. This worked, first, an indisposition, and second, an incapacity to grapple with the difficulties of such an emergency. As the Chapter had never been compelled to resort to the laborious and systematic work of the secret societies in securing new members, there arose about this time quite a general inclination to abandon altogether the campaign system, and depend principally upon the uninfluenced choice of new men. Thus disposed, and unused to anything like a struggle, they were poorly trained to meet a disaster. To-day such a misfortune could have but a temporary effect.

The absence of Delta Upsilon was a continual source of keen regret to her alumni ; and therefore to them, as well as to subsequent graduates, the reorganization, a decade later, meant very much.

W. H. Hartzell, a Delta Upsilon from Jefferson College, becoming a member of '71, in Sophomore year, initiated the movement that resulted, in the spring term of '69, in the reestablishment of Delta Upsilon at Amherst.

The purpose of the reorganizers, as expressed by one of the number, was to secure the enjoyment of literary privileges and social advantages, to attain these ends without oaths or secrets, and to exert an influence, so far as might be, to rid college societies of those foreign and detrimental elements. It is to be noticed that the motive here was not primarily to oppose secrecy, as was the case at the inception of the society in '47. The reason may be found in the pruning process through which secrecy had passed in the interim.

A hall was immediately fitted up in Palmer's block, and a piano was purchased. From the incoming class the Chapter found itself able to secure an excellent delegation ; and, in less than a year Delta Upsilon, reestablished, compared favorably, both in men and literary work, with the other societies in college.

In 1873 the location was changed to Kellogg's block, where two floors were rented, and accommodations superior to those of any other society in college were afforded. Besides a large hall, there were suites in sufficient number to accommodate a majority of the members, and the home system was thus fully inaugurated. Here it was that Delta Upsilon instituted the custom of public social reunions at commencement, a usage since adopted by several of the secret societies.

In the spring of 1880 the Chapter moved into the newly-built Williams block, next the post-office, where well-appointed apartments, including a fine hall, had been prepared for it.

But the chapter-house system — more properly called the chapter-home system — was beginning in earnest to supersede the old usage. Inaugurated in college dormitories, transferred after a time to the flats of business blocks, societies finally took the third step, and established themselves in the only residences appropriate to their present wants, viz. : houses such as other people live in. Four of the seven societies were already in occupation of houses either owned or rented, when, in the spring of '82, the Chapter, through a rare opportunity, became possessed of a house just built, — one of the largest in the town, and admirably adapted to its wants. Situated just opposite the stone residence of Prof. Tuckerman, surrounded by spacious and handsome grounds, with rooms in the rear for sports, this last and permanent accession is a matter of much congratulation to every alumnus who has visited the Chapter in its new house.

With reference to literary work, that certainly is systematically pursued. For at least two years no regular literary meeting has been omitted. As to the success, for example, with which extemporaneous speaking is thus cultivated, reference may be had to the records of the Hardy debates, participated in by eight men chosen from the senior class. Delta Upsilon has been excellently represented, several times having two or three men ; while, during the fourteen years since this contest was established, four of the first and three of the second prizes, one fourth of the whole number, have been given to Delta Upsilon men.

Much pains is also taken in elocutionary drill. An immediate incentive is found in the Kellogg prize contests. Two prizes, of $50 each, are offered for excellence in elocution, and five men are selected from each of the two lower classes to contend, a prize being given to each five. Occurring on Commencement week, this trial is, outside of class-day, the feature that creates the most interest of any. Its honors, therefore, are not only industriously sought by each society, but conversely indicate the efficiency of their work in this line. Of the one hundred and twenty contestants thus far chosen, twenty-eight have been Delta Upsilon men, and five of the twenty-four prizes have fallen to her members, while all these prize men were of the Freshmen five, the first choice from the class. Especially has success been achieved in this contest of late, these prizes having been taken in the classes of '80, '83, '85, and '86.

In composition and delivery of original productions the success has been a little less marked. Taking the highest test, the Hyde oratorical contest between six seniors, at the end of the course, the Chapter's record of representation in numbers is good, though, in the few years since this was established, the prize has not yet fallen to one of her men. The Chapter has a system of training in composition, involving careful criticism and direction by upper-class men to those below, and this is quite efficient and profitable during Freshman and Sophomore years. But the necessity for advanced and independent work in this line by Junior and Senior members is not fully met.

The scholarship of the members and their general rank in the college course are high. Delta Upsilon's record of valedictorians, salutatorians, and general commencement appointments would compare favorably with that of any other society in college. Of the prizes in different branches a fair share has fallen to her men, though not so many as to some of the other societies. It has probably never been to so great a degree the practice of Delta Upsilon to stimulate her men to the specializing and often over-taxing work requisite in the trials for the classical and mathematical prizes.

There remains to be noticed the general regard in which the members of the Chapter are held in college; and this is perhaps best indicated by a review of class honors, bestowed by vote of the class. The highest of these, as a recognition of general merit, is that of Senior President, an office filled by Delta Upsilon men in '74, '78, '79, '81, and '82, — five out of fifteen since the re-establishment. Of the principal literary parts of class-day — formerly five in number, now six — two have, in each of the last three classes, been assigned to Delta Upsilon, and her men have uniformly been especially well represented there. This superior record is significant, since it shows that, whereas this society was once, in a mild way, the common enemy of secret orders, it is now befriended by all; and, as a matter of simple fact, there certainly is not a society in college that enjoys a larger degree of general popularity.

Finally, what, in a broad view, has this organization accomplished during its history in Amherst College? Upon its roll are the names of nearly three hundred men, and every time we hear, as we often do, a man, after having seen enough of life to test the value of his early training, making an estimate of the comparative worth of the hours in college spent on the prescribed text-books, and the hours spent in acquiring facility in extemporaneous expression of thought, an independent and forcible style of putting things either on paper or orally, a command of the resources of language, the voice, the figure and gesture, a power of quick thinking when upon one's feet, practical logic, repartee, — each time we hear so high a price set upon time spent in the acquisition of this culture, we feel a deeper appreciation of the meaning that this organization has had to each one of this number. The line of influence also crosses the threshold and reaches out into active life. Business relationships are formed upon these intimate and reliable acquaintances in college. Practical advantages branch out from this line at countless points. And this ever-strengthening bond, extending itself along the lives of these patriotic supporters of Delta Upsilon and her tenets, has knit a higher relation between them, — that of a living and lasting friendship, — that of life-members in the Fraternity.

These are the direct effects. The indirect are no less genuine and apparent. They are visible in the transformed secret societies. A thorough change has taken place. Secrecy, to be sure, still attaches to these organizations; but its significance to-day is little more than nominal. They have, practically, come very near the system of Delta Upsilon, — simply a private body. The hall still remains closed, but an influential alumnus of one of the oldest secret orders of the college lately said, in conversation with a member of Delta Upsilon, that he had often advised the active members to throw open their hall, since everybody knew their secrecy amounted to nothing nowadays. Looking simply at Amherst we may dwell upon this significant fact, viz., that, although the attitude of Delta Upsilon toward secrecy has changed in conformity with the changes in secrecy that she has been striving to bring about, the notion which, in her earliest history, became formulated as her basis as a literary society has remained unchanged, and proved beyond question its strength and sufficiency. This basis is the essential relation of a private family. On the other hand, secrecy, metamorphosed by a gradual lopping off of the objectional features of earlier days, is palpably and surely approximating the system of Delta Upsilon.

The change is manifest to every one, and unquestionably a matter of regret to no one. The honor of effecting it shall never be arrogated or disputed. It is enough for Delta Upsilon that the fact exists, whatever the factors; but, in making a survey of the results traceable to this organization in Amherst College, no history will ever be silent concerning the influences for good upon the society system flowing from Delta Upsilon during the years when anti-secrecy was active and pronounced, nor upon the deeper meaning of a continued right example and a living instance of the true and appropriate relations of men in a college literary society. Each of her three hundred members believes in her principles, each is proud of her past, each trusts in her future.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF WESTERN RESERVE CHAPTER.

BY ARTHUR C. LUDLOW, ADELBERT, '84.

Between the years 1850 and 1855 financial embarrassment and strife among the Faculty and Trustees brought the fiercest ordeal that Western Reserve University has ever experienced, and which threatened to terminate her existence.

At the beginning of the academic year 1852-53 only two classes, the Freshman and Sophomore, existed, while the Faculty was reduced to the president, one professor, and a tutor.

A year or two before this crisis in the affairs of the college the Delta Psi Fraternity was established. Very little is known of the history of this Society. In the catalogue of the Anti-Secret Confederation, published in 1853, the names of thirty-six members are given under two years, those of '52 and '53; but according to the college catalogue they were members of four or five different classes. Of this number but eleven graduated from Western Reserve University, the rest going to other institutions on account of the unsettled state of affairs then existing. It is, therefore, not to be wondered at that a young Chapter should be blotted out of existence when the two other Chapters, which had ten or fifteen years' growth, were left with scarcely an active member on their rolls.

In the spring of 1864 John Nesbit Wilson, at present a minister, living at Salineville, Ohio, and at that time a Delta U. of Jefferson College, Pa., entered the Sophomore class of '66, at Western Reserve. Two secret societies had been in existence in the college for about twenty years, — the Alpha Delta Phi whose motto was high scholarship, and the Beta Theta Pi, which was composed principally of men who made money and style their aim.

There were men of high worth in these societies; but there were many outside of them equally worthy, who would not countenance them.

Remaining true to the principles of his Fraternity, Wilson soon found out those who held views similar to his own. This small band, the nucleus of the Chapter, consisted of seven men besides Wilson. There was William A. Comstock, of the class of '67, to whose zeal the Chapter owes a great deal for its solid foundation. He died Oct. 4, 1867, only a short time after the completion of his course. His genial nature, his rare talents, and kind Christian character, had made for him a wide circle of friends, who sincerely mourned his early death. In the same class there was John H. Jones, who is at present a minister at Akron, Ohio.

In the class of '66 were Heber A. Ketchum and George F. Fitch, the former at present a minister at Portsmouth, Ohio, the latter a missionary, located at Shanghai, China. From the class of '68, the Hon. Hermon Bronson, a lawyer, at Akron, Ohio; Fred B. Buss, cashier, American Iron Works, Chicago, Ill.; and George Lee, a doctor, now living at Fremont, Ohio. These were all the men thought desirable in the Junior, Sophomore, and Freshman classes. None of the Seniors were spoken to, as they did not feel ready to organize till near the close of the college year, or the beginning of the next.

They were discouraged by the smallness of their numbers, and hesitated to take a stand as a regular society, until they could do so with members sufficient to command the respect of the other societies.

With the determination to establish a Chapter as soon as it could be done with prospects of success, they began to electioneer in the beginning of the college year 1865-66. The class of '69 just entered Freshmen.

In these labors brother Wilson was first in earnestness and zeal, ably supported by Comstock and the rest. As the result of their labors, out of the small class of eleven, seven pledged themselves to the fortunes of Delta Upsilon, only one of the class joining a secret society. The numbers being sufficient, measures were immediately taken to form a Chapter, and meetings were held in private rooms, until a suitable hall was secured, and prepared for occupation. This hall was fitted up, but, at first, in very plain style. There, in the fall of 1865, John Wilson was elected first President, and, duly empowered to do so as a former member of the Fraternity, administered the pledge to fourteen men.

The new Chapter encountered the sneers and opposition of the other societies, who seemed determined to crush the young scion ere it obtained vigorous growth.

There were cloudy days, and plenty of enemies; but no one faltered or turned back, and the Chapter only grew stronger in resisting the opposition put before it. In fact Delta Upsilon grew so strong that Beta Theta Pi disappeared, or rather what was left of it started the Beta Chi Chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon; so from 1868 until 1881 the Alpha Delta Phi, Delta Upsilon, and Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternities have existed together at Western Reserve.

The seventeen years of Delta Upsilon's existence in Hudson contain records of which any fraternity would justly be proud. Her principles were never lowered to wealth, and have ever been rigorously maintained, even at the cost of dismissals. Morality has ever been her first requisite, then scholarship and fraternal qualities; and the strict enforcement of this rule has alone given Delta Upsilon her power.

At no time during Delta Upsilon's existence has there been over seventy-five or eighty students in the college at one time; so necessarily the number of active members must appear small in comparison with Chapters in Eastern colleges. The Chapter has usually averaged about fifteen members. At one time in 1869 there was reported a membership of twenty-four, and in 1872 of twenty-two, at which time the Thirty-seventh Annual Convention was held at Hudson.

From the class of '66, the first in which Delta Upsilon men graduated, to the class of '84 inclusive, Western Reserve College has graduated two hundred and twenty-nine men, and of this number Delta Upsilon furnished seventy-seven. During the same period she initiated ninety-eight men, thus graduating almost eighty per cent. of her members. Of the fifty-seven Junior ex-appointments Delta Upsilon has taken twenty-two, and of the sixty honors given Commencement Delta Upsilon has taken twenty-three, and if the records could be obtained it would be found that a large share of the Sophomore and Freshman prizes have been won by Delta Upsilon men at Commencement prize-speaking.

Most of the alumni are professional men: fifty-two are ministers or studying for the ministry, fourteen lawyers, five doctors, four teachers, and two civil engineers. Eight members of the re-established Chapter have died, all after leaving college: William A. Comstock, '67; George E. King, Rev. Howard R. Parmelee, '69; Frederick H. Cobb, '71; Rev. James M. Shaw, '71; Daniel W. Curtin, '72; Fred S. Bill, '75; and Charles F. Tolhurst, '80.

While in Hudson the Chapter had the same hall during all the years it was there. It was in one of the college buildings, called South College.

This hall was furnished from time to time, according as the finances of the Chapter would warrant. In 1877 a $650 Decker piano was purchased and paid for, it being the first possessed by any college society. Fraternity meetings were held Wednesday nights, after the literary society meetings. The records show that at times they were held weekly, then again once in two weeks, and sometimes twice a week. There have always been two open literary societies in the college ; but, like all such societies existing in colleges with fraternities, they have been on the steady decline. As a rule, the Delta Upsilon men have vigorously supported these societies, and put forth every effort for their success ; and on this account our Fraternity meetings have not been given to literary work to as great an extent as in most of Delta Upsilon's chapters. Late years the literary exercises have been extemporaneous, or they have been a kind of a rehearsal of the regular college literary work. It has been debated, from time to time, whether we should abandon the literary societies and confine our literary work to the Chapter meetings or not. As yet Delta Upsilon men have refused to give up what has been the cause of so much good in years past. As a general thing the exercises of the Chapter have varied from year to year, and it has been customary to give receptions to the lady friends from time to time.

During all her existence the Chapter has been fully alive in her interest in all college affairs, being prominently represented in all organizations, — athletic, musical, and social. Her relations to her rival fraternities late years have been free from any little antagonism, and she has striven to live by her own merits alone. Through the munificent gifts of Amasa Stone, — amounting to $600,000, — and land valued at $125,000, by citizens of Cleveland, Western Reserve College has been removed to that city, and has completed two years in its new home under the name of Adelbert College of Western Reserve University. In many respects it has been like starting a new college, and the Fraternity have passed through a sort of transformation. In addition to the three old ones are Beta Theta Pi, entering upon the third year of its resurrection, Delta Tau Delta, which was established in 1882, although the incubation had been in process a year or so in Hudson, and a chapter of Chi Psi, but recently organized.

Many were the fears that Delta Upsilon might suffer by this change ; but now, at the close of the second year, it can be joyfully said that everything has turned out far above all expectation. Great trouble was experienced in procuring suitable halls, as the college is three or four miles from the central part of the city. Delta Upsilon finally secured quarters, leasing a suite of rooms in a block on Euclid avenue, No. 1938, near the college grounds. A four-years' lease was made. One large room is used for the hall and a smaller front one for a reception-room. In connection with the hall is a cook-room and closets, with all conveniences for spreads, etc. The rooms have been elegantly furnished, and are a source of great comfort to its members, all of whom have been so active in establishing Delta Upsilon in her new home.

The only change that has been made in the by-laws of the Chapter is the time of meeting. It has been changed to Monday instead of Wednesday evening. Instead of boarding at the college refectory the Fraternity has had a private club, and enjoyed it exceedingly. The same plan will doubtless be pursued in the future.

The Chapter is in excellent shape as regards her active members, having a good delegation from each class. The closest harmony and brotherly affection exist among its members, and each one is willing to make personal sacrifice that the transplanting of Delta Upsilon may be successful, and that in her new home she may accomplish a work perchance more successful than ever in the past.

ROLL OF HONOR.

The only honors awarded by Western Reserve College are the Commencement appointments, usually three.

Two prizes are given each year for excellence in declamation, but no record is kept of the victors.

WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY.

Wesleyan University is located in Middletown, Conn., and is the oldest of the colleges under the charge of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1829 the towns within a certain district were invited, by a joint committee of the New York and New England Conferences, to compete for the location of a proposed college by the offer of subscriptions. Its first class, numbering six men, was graduated in 1833. Within recent years the material prosperity has been very greatly advanced. The buildings are elegant, the endowments liberal, and the library of twenty-seven thousand volumes, and its laboratories, give ample facilities for study. In the year 1883-84 there were two hundred students, eighteen of whom were ladies, and eighteen instructors.

The following is a list of the Chapters of the different fraternities represented at Wesleyan University, with the date of their establishment: Psi Upsilon, 1843; Chi Psi, 1844; Alpha Delta Phi, 1856; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 1867; Theta Nu Epsilon, 1870; Kappa Alpha Theta, 1883; and Phi Beta Kappa. There is also the local society, the Eclectic, or Phi Nu Theta, founded in 1837.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF WESLEYAN CHAPTER.

In the fall of 1850 a few young men from Wilbraham Academy entered Wesleyan University. At the same time James Monroe Carroll, at the end of his Junior year, went from Amherst College and joined the Senior class at Wesleyan. At Amherst he had been a member of the Amherst Chapter of the Anti-Secret Confederation, and, as a change of locality made no change in his principles, he was very anxious to organize the opposition to secret societies which he found at Wesleyan, into a similar Anti-Secret Society. About half of his own class of 1851 were opposed to secret societies, and they, together with a considerable number from the other classes, especially from the Freshman class, formed in October, 1850, a society which was called the Equitable Fraternity.

The enterprise started with a membership of five Christian young men, and with the strong and cordial support of Dr. Stephen Olin, then President of the University. The meetings at first were very well attended and profitable; but in the summer term of 1851 the attendance began to wane. As the main object of the society was opposition to secrecy, every student who wished was allowed to join the Equitable Fraternity. The Fraternity thus lost the advantages of selecting its men. In the summer of 1851 Dr. Olin died, and with him the Fraternity lost all support from any of the faculty. The Williams Anti-Secret men had the support of Dr. Hopkins, and the Amherst men of Dr. Hitchcock; but those at Wesleyan were now left to the mercy of their enemies.

Probably the Equitable Fraternity was represented at the Convention of the Anti-Secret Confederation held at Schenectady, N. Y., July 10, 1851; for in the records of the Convention of October 13, 1852, we find that the following resolution was adopted:—

“Resolved, That we learn with sorrow the unpromising condition of the Chapter at Wesleyan University; that we tender to those who remain faithful to our principles our sincere sympathy, and earnestly recommend to them to take courage and go forward.”

In the fall term of 1852 the Equitable Fraternity disbanded. In its membership there were some who, while not violently opposed to all secret societies, yet preferred openness to secrecy, while there was any opportunity to obtain the benefits of good companionship. But when deprived of the benefits of the anti-secret society they decided to join secret societies, rather than lose altogether one of the great benefits of a college course,—the familiar intercourse of congenial minds.

Among those who were prominent of the Equitable Fraternity, and became members of secret societies, were William Toucey Hill, now clergyman at Ridgefield, Conn., who joined the Eclectic, or Phi Nu Theta, a local society at Wesleyan; Calvin Beach Ford, now a clergyman at New Haven, Conn., and Edward Johnson, Lynn, Mass., who each joined Psi Upsilon.

But a large number of the members did not join any secret society, and such persons are now considered members of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity. The membership list, which is given, is taken from the catalogue of the Anti-Secret Confederation, published in 1852.

DELTA PSI SOCIETY OF THE UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT.

A Chapter of the Anti-Secret Confederation, 1851-54.

At the Convention of the Anti-Secret Confederation in 1851, the Delta Psi Society, which had been founded in Vermont University, Burlington, Vt., in 1847, was represented by delegates, and the Society became one of the Chapters of the Confederation. In 1852 the Convention was held with the Vermont Chapter, but at the Convention of 1854, the Chapter severed its connection with the Confederation.

It has been considered that this action removed all its members from membership in the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, and consequently the names of those men who were at one time members of Delta Upsilon have been omitted in all the catalogues since 1853; but, as a matter of historical interest, the names and present residences are here given of all those who appear in the catalogue of 1853, though they are not regarded as members, and do not appear in the membership indices.

The Delta Psi is still a flourishing local society in the University of Vermont, and in 1884 the total number of its members was two hundred and forty. There is one other local society, the Lambda Iota, founded in 1839.

The Greek Letter Fraternities represented at Vermont University are: Sigma Phi, established in 1845; Phi Delta Theta, 1878; and Phi Beta Kappa.

COLBY UNIVERSITY.

Colby University, now entering upon the sixty-fifth year of its history, is situated at Waterville, Maine, a busy village of some six thousand inhabitants, on the Kennebec. Founded in 1820 it led a precarious existence for nearly half a century, till, through the generosity of Gardner Colby, of Newton Centre, Mass., it was placed firmly on its feet, and the old name of "Waterville College" gave place to its present title. The catalogue for 1883-84 showed the presence of one hundred and seventeen students (ten of them ladies), under the charge of a faculty of nine professors and two instructors. It has a library of eighteen thousand eight hundred volumes and nine thousand five hundred pamphlets, and scientific collections of considerable value. Through the thoroughness of its instruction, its moderate charges, and its various advantages, it has already gained an enviable position in the educational circles of the State. An enlargement of its chemical laboratory is proposed, through the liberality of ex-Gov. Coburn, of Skowhegan, — a most generous benefactor of the University. Colby has three academies under its control, — at Hebron, Houlton, and Waterville. The last, the Coburn Classical Institute, now occupies its new building, erected the past year, at a cost of $50,000.

The illustrated annual is called the Colby Oracle. The Colby Echo is published monthly by the Senior and Junior Classes.

The Greek Letter Fraternities of the University are the Delta Kappa Epsilon, established in 1845; Zeta Psi, established in 1850; Delta Upsilon, established in 1852; Sigma Kappa, established in 1870; and Phi Delta Theta, established in 1884.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF COLBY CHAPTER.

BY WILLARD K. CLEMENT, COLBY, '84.

To Daniel W. Wilcox, of the class of 1852, the establishment of Delta Upsilon at Colby is due. A member of the Anti-Secret Confederation at Amherst, coming to Waterville in his Sophomore year, he found a strong feeling against the principles of secrecy, upon which the two societies already existing there were based. Through his efforts the Waterville College Chapter was formed in 1852, with some ten charter members. These promptly appeared with the well-known badge of the Confederation only to meet with the bitterest opposition. They gradually gained in numbers, however, and won an honorable position in college. Scholarship and morality were the first requisites for membership, and so successful were they in the former that, in the first ten years, two class leaders came from their ranks, — W. J. Corthell, '57, and Alex. Fuller, Jr., '59. The meetings, first held in college rooms, were soon transferred to a public hall. Towns people, faculty, and students were gladly received, and often availed themselves of the privilege. The exercises were interesting, varied, carefully prepared, and all bore marks of original thought. The anniversary meetings were among the events of Commencement week. Occasional excursions relieved the tedious round of college work, and served to bind the members closer in the bonds of brotherhood.

But, with the breaking out of the war, came sad days for the Chapter. Delta Upsilon, true to her motto, sent forth the best and bravest of her sons. Some slept their last sleep under Southern skies; others wandered, crippled, weary with the struggle, to other fields, till the spring of 1865 found only four undergraduate members and two resident alumni. Disheartened, they met for the last time and voted to disband. For thirteen years Delta Upsilon slumbered, only to awake to a career of greater activity and increased usefulness. With the gradual decay of the "literary" societies the need was felt of something to take their place, joining to literary work the brotherly feeling of a college fraternity. Through the efforts of James Jenkins, '79, an honorably discharged member of D. K. E., correspondence was opened; and, through the kindness of the Amherst Chapter, in the autumn of '78 Colby again took her place in the ranks of the brotherhood. The past six years have been marked by steady, uniform progress in every branch of society life. The odds to contend with at the start were formidable. Poor, far removed from sister Chapters, the ground already occupied by the representatives of two strong fraternities, the prospect for the young Chapter seemed sorry indeed. But they were bravely met. A beautiful chapter hall was secured in the summer of 1880. Colby has been represented at every convention, — a tax by no means slight. But the earnestness and increased energy that follow each convention season show the wisdom of the course. The finances of the Chapter have been placed on a firm footing general demands are cheerfully met, and a growing interest is manifest in the work and publications of the Fraternity. The literary character of the meetings still remains. The programmes are varied, and the interest and attendance are on the increase. With the change from "anti" to "non" secret the temper of the members in regard to outsiders has altered as well. The meetings now are private, though an occasional "public" is given and attended by the Chapter's many friends. The high standard of morality is still maintained, while in scholarship Delta Upsilon confessedly leads the college. The Chapter possesses a high order of musical ability, has gained a prominent place in athletics, and is well represented in social circles. A fair share of college honors, both literary and otherwise, has always fallen to its lot. It is on the best of terms with the secret organizations, recognizing their points of strength among their membership, and feeling that a spirit of candor and good feeling is far more beneficial than slander and abuse. The chief fault in the Chapter life is the tendency, at times, to rest upon their oars, and trust to fortune and a favoring wind, in place of honorable endeavor.

The history of the Colby Chapter is easily and briefly told. It has been marked by no unusual success, or marred by no disastrous failure. It has not been the home of many of the great of earth; but to those to whom, like the writer, has been granted a closer view of the lives of its members, and read between the lines, there seems to have been an unbroken succession of plain, simple, manly men, ready to follow wherever the blue and the gold might lead, — to suffering, privation; if need be, to death.

The following is an incomplete list of the honors taken by the Chapter: —

THE UNIVERSITY OF ROCHESTER.

The University of Rochester was founded in 1850, and had its origin in an attempt which was made to move Madison University to Rochester. It is situated in the outskirts of Rochester, N. Y., and is surrounded by beautiful grounds, of ten acres in extent.

The buildings of the institution are three in number: an observatory; Anderson Hall, containing the recitation-rooms, and a more than ordinarily well-equipped chemical laboratory; and Sibley Hall, in which are the library of twenty thousand volumes, and rich and comprehensive cabinets of geology and mineralogy. Anderson and Sibley Halls are unpretentious, but substantial buildings of brown-stone. The unproductive property of the institution is valued at $435,275.48, and the productive property at $449,006.99.

Martin B. Anderson, LL.D., has been the only President of the University of Rochester, and it is to his constant and untiring efforts that its present prosperity is largely due. Conforming to the ideas of its President this institution differs from most American colleges in having no dormitories. Diplomas are awarded in two courses, classical and scientific. Eleven professors comprise the faculty. Two publications — The Campus, a semi-monthly, and The Interpres, an annual—are conducted by the students.

The total number of students that have been graduated is eight hundred and twenty-four. As many more have pursued partial and special courses. In 1883-84 the number of students in attendance was one hundred and sixty-five.

Among the most valuable prizes may be mentioned the Davis Medal, awarded to the best orator at Commencement; the Stoddard Medal, or Senior Mathematical prize; the Hull (Senior) Essay prize; the Sherman and Townsend scholarships.

There are at present in the University of Rochester Chapters of six fraternities, founded in the following order: Alpha Delta Phi, 1851; Delta Psi, 1851; Delta Upsilon, 1852; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 1856; Psi Upsilon, 1858; Chi Psi, 1884.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF ROCHESTER CHAPTER.

BY MUNSON H. FORD, ROCHESTER, '88.

Soon after the founding of the University of Rochester, in 1850, two literary societies were formed. They held their meetings in rooms belonging to the college, and enjoyed the sanction and support of the faculty. The object of these societies was mainly the intellectual improvement of their members, and to this end their doors were thrown wide open to any and all of the students who wished to avail themselves of the advantages that they offered. At first no one dreamed of secrecy, nor of any combination or clique which would produce unfriendly feelings among the members. But such a state of things was not destined to continue more than a few months. In the following year two secret societies were established, which took their men indiscriminately from the original literary associations. Upon the latter the effect produced by such a state of things was anything but beneficial. The element of secrecy which existed in the midst of them, having the advantage of union and organization, could control the actions of the literary societies for its own interests; and it did not scruple to use the power it thus possessed. Not only did the secret societies appropriate to themselves what offices they wished, but they made out the programmes in such a way as largely to exclude the neutrals from participation in the literary work.

This manifest injustice was not to be endured, and an effort was made to form an anti-secret society. No sooner, however, was it organized than the secret society men broke it up completely. The students were disheartened, and some of them resolved to make no further attempts to vindicate their rights; but the efforts of the more persevering resulted finally in the formation of a literary club, which met with no opposition.

Such was the condition of things when a delegate from Hamilton was sent to Rochester for the purpose of organizing a new Chapter of Delta Upsilon. Naturally the members of this literary club were the men to whom he broached the subject, and from whom he sought aid in carrying out his project. Although the sad failure of a previous attempt at anti-secrecy was still fresh in their memory, these men resolved to make another effort in what they knew to be a just cause. It is chiefly through the exertions of Fordyce Williams, '53, who is honored as the founder of Rochester Chapter, that the movement was a successful one. With the assistance of his friend, T. C. Barden, '54, Williams selected five men: S. P. Fenn, '54; A. D. Williams, '55; E. J. Pickett, S. Washington, and J. N. Whidden, '56; and these seven men were the charter members of the new society.

Although the Chapter was organized, still greater difficulties were to be overcome before it could be sure of a firm footing. Its existence was yet wholly unknown to any of the other college men, and, knowing the danger to be incurred if the secret societies should find them out, the members determined if possible to conceal their organization until it had become firmly established. Meanwhile a room was secured on Exchange street in which to hold their meetings, and measures were taken to secure the manufacture of their badges. In everything the boys were successful, and, after having eluded detection for several months, they felt themselves strong enough to face the opposition of the other societies. The chagrin of the latter when, one Saturday morning, in the spring of 1852, the Delta Upsilon "swung out," was only equalled by their efforts to break up the Chapter. But they were soon convinced that they could do nothing, and decided that friendship with Delta Upsilon was entirely the best policy.

From this time the success of the new Chapter was assured. It had no difficulty in securing all the good men it wanted; men who possessed the qualities that it has ever made requisite, — morality, scholarship, and sociability. In the winter of 1854–55 the building on Exchange street in which the Chapter had its room was burned, and a new room was secured in the Hamilton Block, on State street. The prosperity of the society continued without interruption until 1865. From that time to 1870 the members of the Chapter were reduced from an average of twenty-five to ten or twelve, and on two occasions the outgoing class left but six active members to struggle against the four secret societies, which united their efforts to weaken the power of Delta Upsilon in every way possible. But what the society lacked in numbers it made up in industry and scholarship; and to the members during that period is due great credit for the earnest and effectual efforts which they put forth to save the Chapter.

In 1870 and 1871 the reaction came, and prosperity greater than ever was enjoyed. This is shown by the fact that at Commencement, in 1871, of the forty-five honors given to the students of the college, Delta Upsilon secured twenty-two, all the other societies twenty, and the neutrals three, giving Delta Upsilon a majority of two over all the secret societies. The latter, finding that Delta Upsilon was destined to live and flourish in spite of them, now decided upon another course of action. They knew that by uniting they could surpass her in numbers at least, and thus deprive her of representation on class-day and also on the Interpres, — a college annual published by the Junior class. The Chapter had for some time contemplated the publication of a magazine of its own, and the success of the secret societies in their plan of exclusion led to the issue of the University Annual by Delta Upsilon. The first number of the Annual appeared in 1871, and its publication was continued with success until 1877, when the barriers between Delta Upsilon and the other societies were completely broken down, and the Chapter was admitted to a fair representation on the college publication. To-day no feeling of ill-will exists between the members of the Chapter and the secret men, but all relations are those of friendship, tempered by a legitimate and wholesome rivalry.

The meetings of the Chapter are held on Monday evening of each week, the evening on which all the societies of the college meet. The Chapter rooms are at 24 State street, almost at the centre of the city, and are large and well-furnished. The general plan of exercises is determined by the by-laws, while an Executive Committee, chosen each term, provides a specific programme and makes appointments to fill it, at least four weeks in advance of each meeting. At one of every three meetings a debate takes place; at the second meeting comes the reading of a paper, the Castalian Fountain, made up of articles lighter and more serious, poems, locals, and the like; while the special feature for the third meeting varies from time to time. On each evening are given declamations, an essay or oration, with carefully prepared critiques, a select reading, an address, and selections of music, either vocal or instrumental. Time is regularly spent, also, in drill upon college and fraternity songs, and careful attention is given to parliamentary rules in the conduct of the meetings. Social recreation is not neglected at the regular meetings. Criticism, constructive rather than destructive, is encouraged, not only upon the literary and musical exercises of the evening, but upon the general conduct of the members in society, at college, and with each other everywhere.

The Chapter is favored in having a large body of resident alumni who take an active interest in its prosperity. Twice a year a reunion and banquet is held, when many of those alumni gather, and with the active members enjoy an evening sociably, as college men know how to do.

The prosperity of the Chapter from 1871 to the present time has been unbroken. During this period Delta Upsilon has received, at nearly every Commencement, more than her share of honors. It is not the aim to secure the largest numbers of any society, though in this respect the Chapter is as strong as any other in the college; but the quality of the men is the guide to their selection. The members of Delta Upsilon at Rochester to-day flatter themselves that the workings of the Chapter are such as to benefit all morally, intellectually, and socially.

MIDDLEBURY COLLEGE.

Middlebury College is situated in Middlebury, Addison Co., Vermont, and takes its name from the town. The college was founded in 1800, for the education of young men of the surrounding country, having especially in view the encouragement of these young men to enter the ministry. How well the college has fulfilled this purpose is evident from the fact that over forty per cent. of its alumni are, or have been, clergymen. The college is comfortably endowed, and is receiving additions to its funds from time to time. The college was very flourishing before the war; but when that broke out many of the students enlisted, and, failing to come back, left the number of students in college very small. The institution is now recovering, and bids fair to become prosperous at no far distant date. In 1883-84 the number of instructors was eight, and of students forty-two. In the fall of 1883 the college opened its doors to ladies, and a few have already availed themselves of the opportunity to enter. The college library contains about fourteen thousand volumes.

The illustrated annual is called the Kaleidoscope, and is published by the Senior class. The regular publication of the college is the Undergraduate, issued monthly by a board of editors chosen from the Senior and Junior classes. The religious interests of the college are maintained by a Young Men's Christian Association; and an Athletic Association fosters the outdoor sports.

The Greek Letter World is represented in Middlebury College by the following Fraternities: Phi Beta Kappa; Chi Psi, established in 1843; Delta Kappa Epsilon, in 1854; Delta Upsilon, in 1856.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF MIDDLEBURY CHAPTER.

By ROBERT J. BARTON, '84.

The fall term of 1856 found Middlebury College with about sixty students and two secret societies. These two societies together included about one-half of the students. Besides the secret societies there was also in the college a literary society, called the Philomathean, which had a good library, held public debates, and had anniversary exercises at the Congregational Church. This society was open to all the students; but the two secret societies, by combining, could manage it according to their own liking. This did not please the neutral portion of the students, and, as some of the strongest men of the college were among them, they determined to start another society, with the express purpose of being able to contend with the secret societies in the elections of the Philomathean society. As some of these were anti-secret men, it was thought best to form a society among themselves, instead of becoming a Chapter of some secret fraternity.

The earliest records are dated Oct. 3, 1856, on which date a number of the neutrals met and determined to form a society that should defend the rights of its members, and acknowledge no superiority but the superiority of merit. A committee was appointed for preparing a constitution and by-laws. These were soon adopted, and a society called the Ζῆτα Φι Society of Middlebury College was established. It was strictly literary.

This new Society soon began to correspond with the Anti-secret Confederation. As a result of this correspondence the Amherst Chapter of this Confederation sent a delegate to Middlebury, Nov. 13, 1856, under whose direction the Ζῆτα Φι Society was converted into a Chapter of the Anti-Secret Confederation. This new Chapter sent a delegate to the convention of the Confederation, held at Amherst, in the spring of 1857, and was formally received as a Chapter. At that time the Chapter consisted of twenty-six members.

The society was strong at first and held the balance of power in the college politics, thus accomplishing the object of its organization. Its influence and prosperity continued for two or three years, when it was weakened by a division among its members. Some thought the Chapter must die; but the loyal portion was strong enough to succeed, and two members of the class of '62 were expelled. About this time the war broke out, and some of the members of the Chapter enlisted in the service. In March, 1862, four others handed in their resignations, which were accepted. The losing of so many members at so nearly the same time left a small number in the society; but, as it had the strength of unity, it preserved its existence. At the close of the war some of its former men returned to their old places, its number was increased, its former prosperity was regained, and has not yet been lost.

The Ζῆτα Φι Society occupied the hall on the first floor over the bank. When it became a Chapter of Delta Upsilon the same hall was retained, and is still occupied by the Chapter. The Chapter meets every Monday evening, during the term, at eight o'clock.

The society has always been literary, but changes in the kind of exercises have taken place. At first the exercises of the first and alternate regular meetings of a term consisted of a debate by two disputants, opportunity always being given for voluntary discussion; the exercises of the second and alternate regular meetings consisted of orations from one member of the Senior and of the Junior classes, declamations from two members of the Sophomore and of the Freshman classes. This order continued until September 29, 1873, when a motion was carried that the Chapter should be divided into two divisions, one of which, having four of its men for disputants, should take charge of the debate ; while the other division should take charge of the literary exercises, which should consist of orations, essays, declamations, and readings, and that this order should alternate, each division taking in turn the debate or the literary exercises. The order of exercises is substantially the same now, only the Chapter is not divided, but appointments are made at the discretion of the critic. At times an evening is devoted to the reading of selections from some author, or to a moot court ; the defendant, if convicted, being sentenced to furnish refreshments at the next meeting. At times the Chapter has publics, none but invited guests being present. At such times the literary exercises of the Chapter are followed by a social hour and refreshments.

Singing has always found a place in the exercises of the Chapter.

The By-laws of the Chapter determine what the offices of the Chapter shall be, of what its membership shall consist, and, to a certain extent, the character of its members. It makes provision for receiving and for expelling members, for granting honorable dismissal and for receiving those honorably dismissed from other Chapters, and binds every member by his honor to be present at all meetings, unless sick or absent from town, and to fulfil all his appointments. They also determine the manner of electing officers, the order in which they shall rank, define the duties of each, and make provisions for filling all vacancies. None but undergraduate members of Middlebury College can be active members of the Chapter, and none but active members have the right to vote. The by-laws state the grounds upon which a member can be expelled, and the way. They determine what shall constitute the archives of the Chapter, when and where the meetings shall be held, the order of exercises, and what shall constitute a quorum for doing business. They make provisions for managing and for increasing the library ; for the use of moneys belonging to the Chapter, not otherwise provided for, and determine who shall have liberty to wear the badge of the Fraternity. All questions of order not provided for by the constitution and by-laws are decided by reference to Cushing's Manual.

In the fall of 1878 the Chapter published the records of the convention, which was held at Middlebury. Besides that it has no publications.

At the present time the Chapter is in a flourishing condition. Its members take a high stand in the society of the village and in the class-rooms; and for many years, from one-half to two-thirds of the twenty-one prizes awarded every Commencement have been given to Delta Upsilon.

The following is an incomplete list of the honors taken:—

BOWDOIN COLLEGE.

Bowdoin College is located at Brunswick, Maine, on the Androscoggin river, about four miles from the Atlantic ocean; it is the oldest college in Maine, and was founded in 1802. It takes its name from James Bowdoin, Governor of Massachusetts, whose son James gave liberally to the college. There is a Medical Department connected with the college, which was founded in 1820. The libraries of the college contain thirty-five thousand volumes. Instruction is given in military science. In the year 1883-84 there were twenty-three instructors and one hundred and eight students in the college, and ninety-eight students in the Medical Department.

The regular college publication is called the Bowdoin Orient.

The following is a list of the Greek Letter Fraternities, which are now represented in Bowdoin College, with the date of the establishment of the Chapters: Alpha Delta Phi, 1841; Psi Upsilon, 1843; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 1844; Theta Delta Chi, 1854; Zeta Psi, 1868; and Phi Beta Kappa.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF BOWDOIN CHAPTER.

By ALFRED W. ANTHONY, BROWN, '83.

The Bowdoin Chapter came into existence in the fall of 1857. Says a member of the class of '58 in a recent private letter:—

“For more than twenty years, prior to 1857 college life at Bowdoin was broken up into little cliques termed secret societies, which included half or two-thirds of the undergraduates. These societies were little orders of nobility, exclusive, aristocratic, and arbitrary in their admission of members. Some of the best men in college were excluded without adequate reason, and with no reason except a supposed lack of family fortune or shining parts. It was esteemed a mark of great degradation not to be admitted; and hence the grossest and most outrageous injustice was perpetrated upon good, deserving men from year to year. Ignorant of the true character of these little cliques I joined one of them early in my Freshman year, and thought myself greatly honored thereby; but soon I became a close observer of the mental suffering and humiliation imposed upon some of the noblest men in my class by their exclusion; and with others of my class, including . . . [mentioning five], who were all members of these cliques, I became indignant at the wrong, and withdrew from the secret societies. We then organized ourselves, and all who had not been admitted to secret-society membership, into one anti-secret society, which flourished while I was there, and was flourishing when we graduated. It numbered among its members some of the brightest, best, and most promising men in the college.”

The infant organization thus described was not launched upon smooth waters. The secret societies fought it strenuously. Their long-established customs were assailed, their prestige shaken, and their very life threatened; no efforts on their part against what seemed an usurper could be too bitter; and the whole strength of the little anti-secret band was called into exercise to prevent being swamped. But the strong sense of justice and the manly spirit of independence which had braved opposition to break loose from the cliques were not easily daunted. Not personal preference, nor pride alone, was at stake, but a principle worth struggling for. There was no surrender.

Assistance was soon found in the sympathy and moral support of Chapters, seeking the same ends, at Williams, Union, Hamilton, Amherst, Colby, Rochester, and Middlebury, already leagued together into the then-called "Anti-secret Confederation," which received to fellowship the new Chapter at Bowdoin. Thus adopted the Chapter found a wider "background of possibilities." New members were more successfully solicited. Out of the Freshmen class ten men were secured from the clutches of secrecy, Colby contributing two; and the other societies, seeing themselves beaten in the canvass, and liable to fare worse in the future if their practices were continued, found themselves forced to open wider their doors, to exercise less unjust selfishness in college politics, vaunt less in their pride, and with more gentlemanliness treat the once-despised neutrals.

Here was victory, and yet a victory that cost the Chapter its life. In this less aggressive attitude of the secret societies laid the chief cause of the decline of Delta Upsilon at Bowdoin: the strongest motive for a hard struggle was lost. When the class of '58 graduated no less noble or worthy men were left in command, but they had not the motive for fighting: the enemy was no longer hostile. Consequent upon this change less ardor was put into electioneering for new members from the incoming classes.

About this time also all minds were turned in another direction, from the college to our country, where another foe threatened.

A black cloud in the South was thickening, which soon burst with fury upon the Northern States; and the men whose energies had been aroused against wrong and injustice in their college life heard the call of duty to a wider field of bravery, where the same energy, the same courage, and the same indomitable perseverance, were required. Thus, with changed reason for existence and with fewer valiant defenders, the Chapter gradually fell into a decline, from which it passed without a struggle into an early non-est.

But the Bowdoin Chapter is not regretted, is not forgotten; from its alumni come cheering words: "I wish there might be a Chapter at Bowdoin at the present time!" is exclaimed.

The last representatives of Delta Upsilon at Bowdoin graduated in the class of '62.

RUTGERS COLLEGE.

Rutgers College was founded as Queen's College, in 1770, the charter being granted by George III. It received its present name in 1825, by Act of the Legislature of New Jersey. It is located at New Brunswick, N. J., thirty-one miles from New York City, on the line of the Pennsylvania R.R. The campus comprises a tract of six acres. The main building, erected in 1825, is of brown stone, well-proportioned throughout, and used almost exclusively for recitation-rooms; Van Neste Hall, built in 1845 by the Alumni, containing a large recitation-room, with chemical laboratory attached, an office of the State Geological Survey, the Chemical Laboratory of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station, and the capacious and beautiful rooms of the Philoclean and Peithesophian Literary Societies; the Schanck Astronomical Observatory, erected in 1865, in its architecture being a copy of the Temple of the Winds at Athens; Geological Hall, embracing the Physical and Chemical Laboratories and the Museum, erected in 1872-73, at a cost of $50,000; Kirkpatrick Hall, an attractive and well-proportioned brown-stone building, including the beautiful chapel and the growing library.

The whole number of students enrolled during 1883-84 was one hundred and twenty-nine, instructed by a corps of nineteen resident professors.

There are two students' publications, — The Targum, a live college paper, issued tri-weekly, by a board of editors elected from the Junior class; and The Scarlet Letter, an annual, published by the societies.

Seven of the Greek Letter Fraternities and Phi Beta Kappa have chapters here:—

Delta Phi, established 1845; Zeta Psi, 1848; Delta Upsilon, 1858; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 1861; Chi Phi, 1867; Phi Beta Kappa, 1868; Chi Psi, 1879; Beta Theta Pi, 1879.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF RUTGERS CHAPTER.

BY REV. RICHARD DE WITT, RUTGERS, '60, AND GEORGE ZABRISKIE COLLIER, RUTGERS, '83.

The Rutgers Chapter of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity was organized in June, 1858, at the room of one of its charter members. It first made itself felt in the college as a balance of power. Before it was founded there were only two fraternities in the college, both of them secret. These, having become firmly established, and meeting with no opposition, kept up a spirited rivalry with each other. There were, also, then, as now, two literary societies connected with the institution, one of which each student was expected to join. Following a custom, far from unprecedented in the history of college politics, the two fraternities tacitly agreed that each should control the elections of one of the literary societies without molestation from the other, thereby taking all power from the hands of the neutral students. A balance of power was plainly needed to check this usurpation, and to restore to their rights those who were inferior to none in literary attainments and knowledge of parliamentary law, whose only offence was the unpardonable sin of belonging to neither of the fraternities. This desire that all competent men should have an equal title to positions of trust and honor in the literary societies led to the organization of what was soon to be known as the Rutgers Chapter of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, and "Justice our Foundation" became thus indelibly inscribed upon the title-page of our history.

The disadvantages resulting from an oath of secrecy were plainly seen by the founders of our Chapter, and the newly established organization received for this reason a cordial welcome into the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, then rapidly enlarging its borders, and having already completed the first quarter of a century of its existence. The advantages afforded by our attitude of non-secrecy are nowhere more clearly illustrated than by the freedom we have of inviting students to our rooms, and even to our meetings, should they desire it, before pledging themselves. Each candidate for admission has an opportunity to examine just what kind of an organization he is about to join, and is not forced to sign his name to a constitution of whose contents he is wholly ignorant. In this way we have obtained valuable members, sought after by other societies, and who would, perhaps, have preferred to join them, were it not for the humiliating condition of the secret oath.

These advantages are becoming more and more apparent even to the secret societies, which, at Rutgers, are slowly, but none the less surely, deserting their colors and principles (?) by divulging numerous details of their constitutions, and interior workings, which it would have been treason to utter not many years ago. A consistent secret society will soon be a rare curiosity at Rutgers. The principle underlying our position has been thus tersely stated by one of our charter members: "Truth never does, and never should, conceal itself; it thrives best in the light."

It must not, however, be supposed that the founders of our Chapter had no other or higher motive for taking upon themselves the sacred vows of brotherhood than the desire to form an artificially united, loosely connected league, to exercise an influence, however purifying, upon college politics. All the advantages arising from a closely bound fraternity were clearly recognized by them, and had their due place in the establishment of our Chapter. Prominent among these were the superior facilities in such an organization for literary culture over the less closely united literary societies of the college. In our smaller and more compact gatherings, from week to week, criticism is freer, and at the same time more candid, judicious, and friendly. The fruit of this careful system of mutual training is witnessed at the annual prize speaking contests, public debates, and other similar exhibitions. Ever since the valedictory has been a rhetorical honor Delta Upsilon has carried it off more than half the entire number of years against the competition of six secret societies. At the annual debates between the literary societies we are always well represented, having this year, for example, four out of the six chosen debaters. In scholarship our men have most of the time, certainly at the present, kept their place at the head of the fraternities.

That secrecy is not an indispensable requisite to brotherly feeling is demonstrated by the many warm and lifelong friendships formed among our members. This sociability reaches its culminating point at our annual suppers, when the sons of Delta Upsilon meet to revive college memories. Truly social affinity, literary kinship, especially when they are combined with moral excellence, knit a cord of friendship which needs not the useless addition of a mysterious oath of secrecy to keep it up.

That critical period of uncertainty which always broods over the early history of an organization has long since passed away, and our Chapter stands upon a substantial, lasting foundation. How prosperous its future shall be depends upon its present and succeeding members. One fact we may lay down as certain,—Rutgers will always have a place for an organization which consumes so large a portion of its meetings in literary exercises. So long as our high standard in this respect is upheld students will always be proud to wear the blue and gold. Many a one who, when he entered our Chapter, could boast of few literary attainments; whose chief title to admission was a plainly manifested desire to improve, has, before graduation, astonished his classmates, and become a living epistle, bearing witness to the excellent training powers of Delta Upsilon. Yet it by no means follows from this record of literary achievement that our men are, or appear to outsiders, unsocial literary drudges. We have always kept in view the development of all the powers of body and soul as well as of mind. The records of the Rutgers Athletic Association effectually contradict any such charge, and our liberal representation of class officers, editors of college periodicals, and class-day appointments, show that our men are not only scholars, but deservedly popular.

It is a matter of regret that we are unable to present to our readers a more chronologically arranged history. Our former members have been so busy making history that they have almost wholly neglected recording it, and our archives are in some instances somewhat threadbare. At present our society is in a most thriving condition, having a numerous and earnest membership, and attractive rooms in the central portion of the city, second to none in the city in point of location. New articles of furniture are continually added to make our rooms more inviting.

Our past is inspiring, our present prosperous, the outlook for the future encouraging. May our expectations of Delta Upsilon not be disappointed, but may she long be spared to continue her useful mission of forming lifelong friendships among the students of "Old Rutgers."

WASHINGTON AND JEFFERSON COLLEGE.

Washington and Jefferson College is situated at Washington, Pa. It had its origin in two academies, founded respectively in 1787 and 1791. These academies, situated in neighboring towns, became colleges by acts of the Legislature, respectively in 1806 and 1802. In 1865 the two colleges were united under one President and Board of Trustees, though some of the instruction was given in each town. In 1869 the instruction of the college, which had been given at Canonsburgh, Pa., was transferred to the town of Washington, where the college is now situated.

The following Greek Letter Fraternities are represented: Beta Theta Pi, established 1842; Phi Gamma Delta, 1848; Phi Kappa Psi, 1852; Phi Kappa Sigma, 1853; Delta Tau Delta, 1861; Phi Delta Theta, 1876; Alpha Tau Omega, 1882; and Phi Beta Kappa.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF WASHINGTON AND JEFFERSON CHAPTER.

By WILLIAM M. P. BOWEN, BROWN, '84.

One of the western Pennsylvania counties bears the honored name of the Father of his Country; the same designation extends to its county-seat. At the latter was established, in 1787, Washington Academy, which later developments, and a charter in 1806, transformed to Washington College. At the village of Col. Canon, seven miles distant from Washington, was started, in 1791, Canonsburgh Academy; in 1802 it secured a regular college charter, and as its neighbor's name perpetuated the loved memory of the staunchest defender in the field of the Declaration of Independence, and the country's first President, so its own title honored him who was then President of the United States, and whose influence had been most deeply felt in the labor of drafting that memorable instrument of freedom which made the United States, — the eminent jurist, Thomas Jefferson. The religious influences at both Jefferson and Washington colleges were almost entirely of a purely Presbyterian type; the intelligent and industrious inhabitants, in whose midst these two seats of learning were located, rendered a hearty and ever-increasing support. Delta Upsilon Fraternity began her existence, in this Chapter, at Jefferson College. The writer of these lines, in the absence of the written records or minutes, has collected the facts from different sources, and is indebted for information about the Chapter's origin to the Rev. W. C. Kuhn, and to the Rev. R. T. McMahan, — its first presiding officer, — as well as to several others.

Long years had rolled on since these two institutions had begun their work, and the field that invites in every college for the supplementary work of fraternities had been more or less fully occupied. There were local organizations, too, — such as the Lyceum, a scientific society at Jefferson; and literary societies, the Union and the Washington at Washington, and the Franklin and the Philo at Jefferson. One of the engrossing events of student life at the latter college was the annual “Contest” — between members of its two literary societies — in oratorical and rhetorical subjects. The “Contest” plan originated at Jefferson College, and thence sowed itself broadcast over the country. Though suspended for at least four years after 1865, it regularly took place in March, and perhaps the most interesting and profitable part was the war of words and clash of argument between the two chosen disputants in exciting debate. “Many a man,” exclaims one, “has been benefited by his experience in win-working during college days, and put into practice afterwards in politics!”

It was through this self-same “Contest” that Delta Upsilon’s opportunity for usefulness was here opened. The Chapters of secret fraternities — “secret societies” — among other things had used their boyish secrets as an ample cloak to carry on the aggrandizement of their own members, and this, furthermore, to the exclusion and rejection of, oftentimes, worthier men, who did not possess the fortune, or misfortune, to be intimately associated with them in the bands of brotherly friendship. In the elections of the “Contest”-participants blind influence had thus taken the place of discrimination, and regard for merit; yet, as very naturally in such a case, to the objection and protest of the more fair-minded electors. They bethought themselves of remedies, and in their quest of relief turned their eyes to Delta Upsilon, in the words of New England’s Quaker poet: —

“The hope of all who suffer,
The dread of all who wrong.”

The Rev. Stephen A. Califf, '62, an active organizer, had received some information and a catalogue of the Fraternity from a then recent graduate of Williams. The Hamilton Chapter, through its delegate, rendered kindly aid alike at the time of organization and subsequently. The rising Chapter's interests were being perfected, and in March, 1860, the gold and gems of Delta Upsilon flashed in the village streets and shone in the college hallways. An excellent and praiseworthy beginning had indeed been made; its "motive," says a brother, "was justice, and the best interests and honor of our Alma Mater." Experience had taught them to adopt "Nothing secret" for their motto,—cordiality with no suspicion of concealment. Their efforts were at once singularly successful, and the "D. U. men" commanded the respect of their college associates. In the Philo society they were fairly represented, while the balance of power was held by them in the Franklin. Their success, however, was not abused. Delta Upsilon "decided every election on principle," not electing her own members unless the best fitted for the positions offered. At the very first election—in 1860—after organization, the society's object in securing justice was achieved by the selection for "Contest" debate of the two members of the class who divided its first honor; yet both were "neutral men," that is, not members of Delta Upsilon, or of any secret society. One of these debaters remarks, "We both owed our election largely to the D. U. vote, in both the literary societies. Up to this time it had been almost impossible for a 'neutral man' to get a position on the 'Annual Contest'." Such, then, was the happy change wrought by the society's honor and strength.

The "rose of joy" blossomed beautifully; the selection of members was made with care from the four regular classes, and later a few of the most advanced in the Preparatory Department of the college were admitted: the society was decidedly successful and permanent. The dormitory system not being in vogue here, the students were obliged to rent rooms in private families. The meetings, therefore, were necessarily held in these places, as well as in other rooms fitted up for society purposes; they were always highly enjoyable, and the character of the work done eminently satisfactory and promising.

But the days of peace were fitting. The war of the Rebellion arose, and was rolling its disastrous clouds over the land. Among those who so promptly responded to President Lincoln's call, on April 15, 1861, for seventy-five thousand volunteers, were youthful students from Jefferson and from Washington, exchanging, to support principles in their belief right and vital, the familiar books for swords and muskets, the calm retreats for the tented camp and the battle-field: their energies were transferred from peaceful study to the bustling life of the soldier. Fewer in number, since not situated in the Confederate States, but still represented, were those whose belief impelled them to enter the ranks of the "grey." Many of the students entered the army at different periods of the protracted struggle, but no truer-hearted soldiers were to be found than the bright band from Delta Upsilon. This steady drain weakened the strength of the college: some of her sons returned to their books, others to the walks of civil life, and yet others left only tender memories and their names as a heritage to Alma Mater.

Scarcely had the unloosed dogs of war been chained once more, — and forever, 'tis to be hoped, — and the reinvigorated college to feel the comparative prosperity which followed the close of the war in a large accession of soldier-students, when another source of decay began to arise from the troubles over the union of the two institutions, — a project agitated before the separate Boards of Trustees since 1807; but in 1865 more pressingly urged for consideration, by the offer of an addition to the endowment of the sum of fifty thousand dollars, conditioned on such union. A plan was at length agreed upon, and on March 4, 1865, an act¹ passed by the Pennsylvania Legislature became a law by the signature of the Governor. Under this bill the two institutions were united under one Board of Trustees and one President, with Preparatory School, Freshman Class, and Scientific Department at Washington; and Sophomore, Junior and Senior classes at Canonsburgh.

It is at this point that a Delta Upsilon Chapter, as it were, arises at the town of Washington, where part of the now Washington and Jefferson College work is carried on. This so-called Chapter had separate meetings and a separate organization from the Jefferson Chapter of old at Canonsburgh, and in its ordinary routine work had "no more connection with it than with any other Chapter." But yet, as everything in the united colleges themselves at the two locations—seven miles apart—was under a single management and name; and further, as the classical students, after taking their Freshman year at Washington and being members of that Delta Upsilon society, became on going to Canonsburgh for their Sophomore and subsequent years' studies, members of the society located there,—it has seemed preferable to make a change from the last Fraternity Triennial, and, following the example of the Washington and Jefferson General Catalogue in classifying its alumni, to call all members at both locations, beginning with the class of 1866, the "Washington and Jefferson" division, and all members prior to that class the "Jefferson" division of the Chapter. There was never any separate Chapter at Washington College while the two colleges were separately conducted; it was only on the union of the two that the former Jefferson Chapter, transformed with its college, through the act of union, to Washington and Jefferson Chapter, branched out from its former location at Canonsburgh to Washington Town,—one Chapter at two localities. The members of the branch at Washington were Freshmen, on the regular classical curriculum, scientific students during their entire stay, and any members who might be admitted in the last part of their preparatory studies for entering the Freshman class; the members at Canonsburgh were Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors on the regular classical curriculum, — this latter portion, of course, comprising the larger part of the whole college.

Delta Upsilon at Washington came from Delta Upsilon at Canonsburgh. When the plan of union went into effect, in 1866, and the class of 1869 went to Washington to complete its first year's studies, it contained a member of Delta Upsilon, in the person of Andrew Steele Miller, Esq., 1869, now counsellor at law in Pittsburgh, and one who has courteously contributed to these pages. Knowing the benefits of the Fraternity, and seeing the need of it there, he joined with two friends in an effort to start the society. A canvass among the students revealed some fourteen congenial spirits out of the limited number of students in attendance, and, on request, a member of the Chapter from Canonsburgh came to Washington to effect the new organization. Their lines, however, had not fallen in pleasant places; opposition was strong and flagrant. As has been said, "The students of the college who belonged to secret societies were very hostile to us and tried to break up the organization in various ways. Many of them made themselves so offensive and threatening that for a short time many of us went armed to protect ourselves from actual violence." Such treatment — hardly "above suspicion" — is the pen of history compelled to record! At Canonsburgh Delta Upsilon was puissant, her support courted, her disapproval feared.

The Rev. Neville B C. Comingo, of Pittsburgh, among other things, has made interesting mention of the patriotic observance of Washington's birthday, — the "22d of February celebration." There were public exercises, — such as a poem, oration, — and afterwards the toasts and the masquerade. The toasts "were the Juniors' part of the performance, and were a series of pasquinades and witticisms, which were vastly enjoyed by every one except the victims. The masquerade came as near the Italian Carnival as anything we could have in this country. A large majority of the students put on masks and went cruising about the streets calling on their various lady friends" In 1868, at least,—when three members of the Chapter took prominent parts at the celebration,—“the under classes gave, as a part of it, a complete burlesque of the whole literary performance of the Seniors, which was infinitely more enjoyable than the originals. The masquerade lasted far into the night. Such a jubilee was only possible in a small village, and is not kept up in Washington.”

Canonsburgh and Washington were thus dividing the pedagogical honors of the college. This condition of affairs, however, was materially changed by 1869. The two colleges, in the judgment of the Board of Trustees, were before then not sufficiently consolidated to ensure success; so, on the application of this Board, an amendment¹ to the bill of 1865 was passed by the Pennsylvania Legislature, Feb. 26, 1869. This amendment established all departments at the town of Washington, and “the buildings abandoned at Canonsburgh were given to a Board of Trustees for the use of an academy.”

This removal had been desired by two-thirds of the Board of Trustees, but was unsatisfactory to a minority. Thereupon litigation ensued, and the courts were called upon to decide the legality of these proceedings. A bill² in equity was filed in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, praying for an injunction against the removal of the college's property and classes from Canonsburgh to Washington. After trial this bill was dismissed by the unanimous vote of the Judges; and, says Washington and Jefferson General Catalogue, “their decision was afterwards affirmed by the unanimous vote of the Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States, before whom it was argued on appeal." A bill¹ had also been introduced in the United States Circuit Court, praying for substantially the same things as prayed for in the bill filed in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and meeting with the same fate of dismissal. All this litigation opened with an injunction, in the fall of 1869, which forbade the teaching at Washington of the Sophomore, Junior, and Senior classes, and which practically, for the time being, closed the institution to those classes and sent their members to other colleges. This injunction was dissolved within a few months, but its effects lasted longer. Many of the students who had been driven away did not return, and these classes of 1870, '71 and '72 were accordingly very small.

In this general demoralization it was deemed best that Delta Upsilon should cease to exist here as an active Chapter. The society had been weakened by the weakening of Jefferson College in the war of the Rebellion through the withdrawal of students to the army, though later strong at Canonsburgh. Its planting at Washington, in 1866, had been bitterly opposed by organizations which bore the same name of "Fraternity," its brief existence there more or less harassed, — in particular by one "secret society," — and when the general stand-still did come, the best, most creditable and honorable course seemed to be a discontinuance of the work. During the period after the close of the war the partly united college was in a "peculiar state." Previous to that great national contest the two colleges had been well attended. Subsequently, when united by the act of 1865, the institution was momentarily prosperous; only a few colleges in the country graduated a larger class than that of 1868; "but debt," says one of its members, "narrow means, discords, and the agitation of the union of Washington and Jefferson, were bringing on a period of decline from which the college has now (1884) recovered so far as finances are concerned, but has not yet regained its former large attendance." All these various changes, of course, reacted in an important degree on Delta Upsilon, and indirectly form a necessary portion of its history.

Yet, while engaged in active work, she played her part well; her record is creditable alike to her members and to the college. Distinguished graduates have left the old college halls, and Delta Upsilon has numbered able men in her ranks. Prominent and faithful in all walks of life, in business and in the industrial arts, at the teacher's, editor's, and author's desk, in the field, in the pulpit, at the bar, in the "wearisome hospital of pain," they have been true to their trust and borne in mind their college society's arms: "Δικαία Ὑποθήκη." And as they look back along life's devious pathway, and recall the gay, bright scenes of youth, their thoughts instinctively turn to one clearest object, and they can but utter in contemplation the lines of the British bard: —

"She was a form of life and light,
That, seen, became a part of sight;
And rose where'er I turned mine eye,
The Morning-star of Memory!"

BROWN UNIVERSITY.

Brown University was founded in Warren, R. I., in 1764, but in 1770 it was moved to Providence, R. I., where it is now located. It was first called the Rhode Island College, but in 1804 took its present name from Nicholas Brown, one of its benefactors.

The list of its Presidents is as follows: James Manning, D.D., 1765-90; Jonathan Maxcy, D.D., 1792-1802; Asa Messer, D.D., 1802-27; Rev. Francis Wayland, D.D., 1827-55; Dr. Barnas Sears, 1855-67; Alexis Caswell, D.D., LL.D., 1867-72; Rev. E. G. Robinson, D.D., LL.D., since 1872. Within the last ten years the prosperity of the college has been greatly increasing. It has a large and complete library and a very fine library building. In the year 1883-84 there were nineteen instructors and two hundred and sixty students. The students publish a college paper, — The Brunonian; and the secret societies issue an annual, — The Liber Brunensis.

The following is a list of the Greek Letter Fraternities represented in Brown University, with the dates of the establishment of the Chapters: Alpha Delta Phi, 1836; Delta Phi, 1838; Psi Upsilon, 1840; Beta Theta Pi, 1847; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 1849; Delta Upsilon, 1860; Chi Phi, 1873; and Phi Beta Kappa.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF BROWN CHAPTER.

By WILLIAM T. PECK, BROWN, '70.

On the third of November, 1860, several members of the Freshman Class of Brown University met to form an open society. They set forth as their reason for such a step that the practice in literary exercises of a kind fitted to improve their capabilities for public and extemporaneous speaking was a thing most necessary, and a valuable accessory to the privileges which they already enjoyed, and that the opportunities for such improvement then presented were encumbered with serious objections. The old literary societies of the college existed only in name, and the numerous secret societies did not furnish that which these students desired. The Rev. Barnas Sears, D.D., President of the University, was consulted, and gave the society his approval; while the Gamma Nu Society of Yale College furnished them with a name and a constitution.

The stirring events of the winter and spring of 1860-61 gave them great subjects for thought, and their records show that the state of the country aroused them to earnest debate and patriotic extemporaneous addresses. The society flourished; the next year good men joined them; the expenses were kept as small as possible, and the one object—literary culture—was never lost sight of. The society at first was intended for the members of the Sophomore and Freshman classes; but, in 1863, all distinction with regard to classes was removed. It continued to be of the same general character for the next three years; but when the class of '66 left the college the society was again changed to a Freshman and Sophomore Association, and seven Sophomores of the class of '69 represented Gamma Nu.

They secured a large number of men from the class of '70, and were soon in as prosperous a condition as before. The society always met with opposition from the secret organizations of the college. The earlier classes were strong enough to meet this, but afterwards the contest was more difficult. Too many men were admitted to its membership, and, as all did not become interested in the welfare of the society, their withdrawal affected its prosperity. Still there were always as strong men in this society as in any society of the college. In 1867 the time of membership was extended to the whole course. At the beginning of the year 1868 a new pin was adopted, a gold star and wreath taking the place of a book, — the badge of the society up to this time. In the spring of 1868 the onward progress of the society was marked by their first public entertainment, at which music, a debate, and literary exercises were enjoyed by their friends in the city.

After considerable correspondence and personal effort upon the part of Mr. Henry R. Waite, editor of Our Record, published by the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, on the 22d of May, 1868, the society passed the following vote, that: "The Gamma Nu Society be, and the same is, hereby resolved into a Chapter of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, this resolution to take effect on the administration of the pledge by the authorized member of the Fraternity." On the 1st of June, 1868, Mr. Waite gave the pledge of membership to seventeen members of Gamma Nu; others received it the week following; and thus a flourishing chapter of Delta Upsilon was founded in Brown University. During the summer of 1870, through the liberality of prominent citizens of Providence, a hall was tastefully furnished for the Chapter. The society had every advantage, and the members were not slow to improve them. Since that time fourteen classes have gone forth from the college, and among them bands of brothers from Delta Upsilon, of which the Fraternity has no occasion to be ashamed. They included men honored by the University for their scholarship, men of fine literary culture, men of strong thought and power of expression, and men of high moral character. The writer of this sketch remembers a time in his college life when every member but one was a professed Christian man, and he believes that the gain derived from no single study of his college course was equal to that of the influence and associations of this earnest literary society. The public entertainments, three or four each year, maintained since 1868, have been of no small advantage and pleasure. Music has not been neglected, and the society Glee Club has furnished additional attractions at their meetings.

The society has issued some publications. In the college year 1865-66 the Caduceus was published, a college annual containing strong literary articles and information in regard to the organizations of the University. It appeared again in 1868-69. For the three years following it was published in book form, and its beautiful execution and high character made it of great credit to the Chapter. The Delta Upsilon conventions were held with the Brown Chapter in 1870 and in 1881, at the latter of which Prof. E. B. Andrews, of Brown, class of '70, was the orator of the occasion.

In this article no names have been given of those who were especially active. Where all have been so devoted it would seem invidious to do so; but it might be said that to the brothers of '64 belongs the honor of founding the society, and to the brothers of '69, '70, and '71, the honor of changing it to the Delta Upsilon.

During the year 1883 the resident Alumni have formed an Alumni chapter in Providence. It is expected that this association, while enjoying their own fellowship and advancing in literary culture, will be a source of strength and support to the Delta Upsilon Chapter of Brown University.

MADISON UNIVERSITY.

Madison University was chartered March 26, 1846, but dates back to May, 1820, as the "Hamilton Literary and Theological Seminary." It is located at Hamilton, a fine village of two thousand inhabitants, beautifully situated among the hills of Central New York.

The college has a scientific as well as a classical course, and has extensive cabinets of natural history, and valuable chemical and philosophical apparatus.

The number of students at the college proper, during the year 1883-84, was ninety-five; the number of professors, twelve.

The Junior class publishes an annual, The Salmagundi, and the Senior and Junior classes issue a bi-weekly, The Madisonensis.

The following Greek Letter fraternities are represented at Madison University: Delta Kappa Epsilon, established 1856; Delta Upsilon, 1866; Beta Theta Pi, 1881.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF MADISON CHAPTER.

BY FREDERICK AUGUSTUS POTTER, MADISON, '81.

Early in the history of Madison University two literary societies, Æonia and Adelpia, were organized under the direction and patronage of the faculty. The privileges of the society were open to all the students in the institution, but the general management, the election of officers, making literary appointments, etc., was left to the members themselves. Under this scheme harmony prevailed and good work was done.

In 1856, however, a new element insinuated itself, producing discord and dissension in both societies. A Chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon was established at Madison, and the inevitable tendency of secrecy was soon made manifest. Still retaining their membership in the local organizations, the Delta Kappa Epsilons exerted their united influence to secure for themselves, to the exclusion of the other members, not only the officers, but the literary appointments. The other fruits of secrecy were felt in the general college life. How to meet and counteract these influences was the question.

In 1865, M. C. B. Oakley, Rochester, '64, a Delta Upsilon, came to Madison to take the last year of his theological course. One day, as a number of students of like mind were conversing with Oakley, one inquired concerning the Delta Upsilon badge worn by him. An explanation of the principles of Delta Upsilon followed. The next question was: "Why can't we have a Chapter here?"—"Well, why can't we?" was the reply; and immediate steps in that direction were taken. This was late in 1865. On November 21, a meeting was held in the room of George O. Whitney, '69. The Constitution of the Fraternity was examined by the five young men present, and the following, with their names subscribed, was appended to the Constitution: "We, the undersigned, feeling the necessity of an anti-secret organization in this (Madison) University, and our views being fully expressed in the preceding preamble and Constitution of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, do agree to form such a society, adopting said Constitution as our guide."

Their admission into the Fraternity as the Madison Chapter immediately followed, with a charter membership of fifteen good men. The positions of honor and usefulness since attained by several of those whose names are on the list of charter members, are significant of the very favorable auspices under which the Chapter was founded. Among other names, we may mention the Rev. H. H. Peabody, D.D., '66, Rome, N. Y.; James M. Taylor, '67, Professor of Pure Mathematics in Madison University; the Rev. C. E. Becker, '67, President of Benedict Institute, Columbia, S. C.; and the Rev. J. W. Ford, '69, Bay City, Mich.

Delta Upsilon principles at once took firm hold, and with beneficial results entered deeply into the student life at Madison. Until 1882 the literary and business meetings were held in rented rooms. That the rooms first occupied were quite unpretentious may be judged from the fact that the first annual rental amounted to only sixteen dollars. The growing prosperity, however, soon called for better quarters, and in March, 1873, the rooms in Smith's block were fitted up by the Chapter at considerable expense. Here, for more than nine years, the Chapter found a pleasant home.

But even this home did not realize the ideal cherished by the alumni as well as the undergraduate members. It became apparent that the great need was a Chapter-house, to be owned by themselves, and better adapted to their wants than any suite of rooms to be secured in the village. In 1880 a site was purchased, and in the spring of 1882 ground was broken for the new building. December 13, 1882, the Chapter took possession of its new home, and the formal dedication took place in Commencement week, June 20, 1883, the address being delivered by the Rev. George Thomas Dowling, '72, of Cleveland, Ohio. The site is on the corner of Broad and Mill streets, and is the finest in the village. A fine cedar hedge extends the whole length of the lot on both streets. Over the gateway is a Delta Upsilon monogram of ground and stained glass, set in a fine archway; and this, being illuminated at night, shows with beautiful effect. The house itself is a handsome brick structure, fifty-five by forty-five feet, in the Queen Anne style of architecture, with a spacious veranda on the Mill-street side, and is fitted up with all the latest improvements for warming and lighting. On the first floor, besides the spacious hall, at the farther end of which a broad staircase ascends to the second floor, is a large parlor, a library and reading-room, and a students' room. These rooms are entered through folding-doors. On the next floor above is another hall, from which we enter the assembly-room, capable of seating two hundred persons, and, on the other side of the hall, two suites of students' rooms. Ascending another flight of stairs, we come to still another suite of students' rooms. The rooms for the students have been fitted up by the Chapter in keeping with the appointments of the rest of the Chapter-house, and are occupied by undergraduate members. The value of the real and personal property of the Chapter is estimated at nine thousand dollars.

From the time of the founding of the Chapter we have rejoiced in steady and decided growth. In the early days there were struggles for the supremacy, but never, even then, was a doubt entertained that Delta Upsilon would make her way, till she should stand where she does to-day, exerting a decided influence for good in the college life. She has always endeavored to maintain in her members a high moral standard, and to educate them in the principles that go to make up true manhood. That her intellectual requirements and attainments have been of a high order our record of honors and prizes will show. Out of nineteen valedictorians thirteen have belonged to Delta Upsilon. Out of the entire number of honors conferred during the past eleven years Delta Upsilon has received more than half; while out of the entire number of prizes bestowed Delta Upsilon has received three-eighths.

The prospects of Delta Upsilon at Madison were never brighter than now. With a beautiful and comfortable Chapter-house, the utmost harmony prevailing among its members, the classes all represented by active, able, enthusiastic men, it is hard to conceive how her future could look more hopeful.

THE UNIVERSITY OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

The University of the City of New York was incorporated in 1831. Its origination was not due to any one individual, but was the united effort of a number of the friends of education in New York at that time. For four years (1831-35) it held its sessions in Clinton Hall, awaiting the completion of the building located on Washington square, which it has since occupied, and to which it has given its name. The first President of the Council was Hon. Albert Gallatin, and the first Chancellor, Rev. James M. Mathews, D.D., his successors being Hon. Theodore Frelinghuysen, LL.D., and Drs. Ferris, Crosby, and Hall, the last named now holding the office ad interim. As matters of universal interest it may be mentioned that in the University building Prof. John W. Draper, so widely known as a scientist and author, first took a photograph of the human face; and here also Prof. S. F. B. Morse carried on his experiments, and, with the advice and assistance of Dr. Draper, completed the invention of Telegraphy, which has rendered his name famous. At present the faculties of the Departments of Arts and Science contain, together, fifteen professors; and the number of students for the year 1883-84, in these two departments, was ninety. The Law Department of the University, occupying a portion of the building on Washington square, has a faculty of five professors, and had for the year 1884-85 fifty-five students. The Department of Medicine, located on East 26th street, has a faculty of forty-three professors, and for the session 1883-84 had enrolled five hundred and fifty-one students. The college paper is called the University Quarterly, and the annual, the Violet. The Greek Letter Fraternities represented at the University are: Psi Upsilon, founded in 1837; Delta Phi, 1841; Zeta Psi, 1846; Delta Upsilon, 1865.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF NEW YORK CHAPTER.

By ALBERT W. FERRIS, M.D., New York, '78.

Before the first class was graduated from the University, in 1833, two literary societies had been established, — Eucleian and Philomathean. Psi Upsilon began her existence at the University in 1837; Delta Phi in 1841; Zeta Psi — the remaining one of the existing societies — was born in 1846.

Rivalry was active between these bodies for the possession of offices in the two literary societies, and in the class organizations. In 1856 a legacy was left to Eucleian by the will of a former member, providing for salaries to be paid to the treasurer and librarian of the society. The struggles now became greater, and, through combinations between the Greek societies, the neutrals were deprived of all offices in the gift of the students. After several years of such monopoly had passed into history the neutral element began to realize that its superiority in numbers, and often in ability, was of no avail against organization and concerted action. Easily conciliated individuals had often promised to vote for candidates of one of the secret societies; but now they resolved to be tools no longer. The "Neutral League" was organized, its members being all Eucleian men, since that society was felt to be the great battle-ground, and the proper place to test their strength. The purpose of the league was to end the monopoly of the secret societies, and to secure representation to the neutral element. Hence its attitude was one of open hostility. Its leading spirits were Isaac Ferris Ludlam, and John Ogle, Jr.; the former excelling in general scholarship, the latter in oratory, while each was proficient in both, and also possessed of musical ability and social qualities which combined to render them popular with their fellows.

The secret fraternities, recognizing the strength of the new organization, and fearing that justice would prevail, entered into an alliance, in an effort to destroy the league. A common pin was adopted, having the form of a coffin, ornamented with a skull, and was worn by all the secret-society men. The first trial of its strength was made by the league at Eucleian elections, its only senior member, Thomas Burnett, running for president of that society. Although the opposition candidate was one of the most popular men in college, and the strongest candidate that could be found in the secret alliance, the league and its adherents were successful. Had this effort failed, perhaps the league would have been disbanded; but its success gave its members a desire for a permanent organization. As a step in the direction of permanency it resolved itself into the "Anti-secret Society," which in turn speedily became the New York Chapter of Delta Upsilon. On the 19th of December, 1865, about fifteen months after the organization of the Neutral League, Messrs. Martin, '65, Willcox, '66, and Eddy, '68, of Hamilton, administered the pledge to fourteen men from the classes of '66, '67, '68, and '69, and received them into the Fraternity.

At a subsequent Eucleian election it was known that thirty-one men were entitled to vote, sixteen of whom had signed a pledge to support the Delta Upsilon candidate. When the vote was told, it was found that Delta Upsilon had been defeated by treachery, for the opposing candidate received sixteen votes. As the constitution of the Chapter then contained stringent requirements for the united support of any Delta Upsilon candidate chosen in society caucus, a thorough search was made for "that sixteenth man." The mystery was not solved until the Junior Exhibition, March 29, 1866, when the betrayer "swung out" a Zeta Psi pin, and was duly expelled. This episode was the cause of the introduction of a Chapter oath of especial solemnity, which was immediately adopted.

In later and more peaceful times the Chapter went to the other extreme in this matter, substituting for the Chapter oath a very mild promise to obey the constitution and by-laws.

The latter mild promise was in turn displaced by the general Fraternity pledge.

On January 23, 1867, the Chancellor, Rev. Dr. Isaac Ferris, and Prof. Henry M. Baird, became honorary members of the Chapter, indorsing its principles and signifying their sympathy with its aims and methods. Thus the Chapter at the outset secured a status possessed by none of the secret societies. Within a few years Prof. E. A. Johnson and B. N. Martin also accepted election to honorary membership.

In 1869 a graduate Chapter, called The New York Club of Delta Upsilon, was formed. Its handsome lodge was dedicated at a special meeting, oratorical and poetic efforts rendering the occasion a notable one. The rooms of the club were also occupied by the undergraduate Chapter, and constituted the office of the quondam Delta Upsilon University Quarterly Review. After a brief existence the club fell into debt, and the efforts of even Henry R. Waite and Isaac F. Ludlam did not suffice to save it from dissolution.

A remarkably successful position was reached by the Chapter in May, 1871, at convention time. The Chapter then numbered seventeen men. This number included the first four honor men of '71, the first three honor men and two other orators of '72, the first three honor men of '73, the second honor man and another orator of '74, the Presidents of the Senior and Freshman classes, and the future President of '74, in its Senior year. Eleven of the seventeen were elected into Phi Beta Kappa.

During the years 1874-75 and 1875-76 the Manhattan and New York Chapters were associated in the use of lodgerooms, and for part of the time in literary meetings. The latter were inaugurated February 25, 1875, and for the rest of the college year occurred on Thursday evenings of each third week.

On two occasions the Chapter was apparently near extinction. At the Commencement of the class of '78, six men were graduated, and a seventh left college. Some of the six remaining in the Chapter became alarmed at the condition and size of the Chapter; others were influenced by seductive whispers from two of the secret societies. The result was, that four men offered their resignations, and a fifth drifted back into the neutral condition; one only remaining perfectly steadfast in his allegiance to Delta Upsilon. The cause of this stampede lay in the fact that the work of the Chapter had been left to and performed by a very few members, while the others had been willing to stand by and approve. When the workers had been graduated, the remnant thought itself unable to stand. Learning of the condition of affairs, two graduates made an effort to save the Chapter, and found that the man who had drifted to the neutrals was ready to return, if supported.

By this time the convention of 1878 had been held, and the New York Chapter, consisting of two members, had not been reported, as the annual for that year shows.

Before the close of the year three new men were initiated. At the beginning of the year 1880-81 the first efforts of the prudential committee to secure acquisitions from the class of '84 were futile. Disheartened, the Chapter resolved to die a natural death by the graduation of its five members, all being in the class of '81. The forty-sixth convention was notified to this effect, as were also the two graduates previously mentioned. These graduates, however, persuaded the Chapter to reconsider its decision, and, at this second crisis, aided the renewed efforts of a most energetic undergraduate member. Two more men were secured from '81, and one from '82. During this time two weak members of the Chapter had been elected into a secret society, and were urged to desert and join it. Both succumbed,—one after the most fluent and positive assertions of fidelity to the Chapter, and the other after voluntary promises not to desert it,—and both were expelled. But these incidents were like snags in the stream; the current was still powerful.

The next month four of the best men in '84 were initiated, after some trouble. The secret societies, not realizing that principles are immortal, had viewed with satisfaction the weakness of the Chapter, and had rejoiced at these last defections. Common cause was made against Delta Upsilon, and steps were taken to prevent the Freshmen from being initiated. A spurious telegram, telling of a father's illness, failed to inveigle one of the candidates. Another, decoyed to a distant part of the city by a forged letter (purporting to come from a Delta Upsilon graduate), was forcibly seized, transported home, and instructed to remain there. A third, captured in the street, escaped after being blindfolded and put through a mock initiation; but, though delay occurred, the four men were initiated before midnight. Since then, disregarding the financial discomfort occasioned by loss by theft of furniture in storage, and lately a second loss by fire in the lodge-room, the Chapter has prospered. Two more men were added to the 1884 delegation, and of each succeeding classes the best men have joined Delta Upsilon. The President of the Freshman class for the past three years has been a member of Delta Upsilon.

The Chapter holds meetings weekly, during the college year, for literary, musical, and social purposes, although most of the members can be found in the room daily.

The Chapter By-Laws contain the usual provision for frequent election of officers, and for the exercises at the meetings, and has never contained any features worthy of special note, excepting the Chapter oath and the caucus rules, to which reference has been made.

The Chapter publishes annually a pamphlet containing its roll of membership, and the honors and prizes and positions of note secured by any of its members in the fields of scholarship, literary effort, class organizations, and athletics.

The Chapter took part in the publication of The Index, which catalogued the clubs and organizations. This publication was living in 1868, but is long since extinct, and little can be learned of it.

The undergraduates share with the N. Y. Delta Upsilon Club its lodge-rooms, which also constitutes the central office of the Fraternity.

The following is a list of the members who have taken the five highest honors: —

MIAMI UNIVERSITY.

Miami University was located in Oxford, Butler County, Ohio, on the line of the Cincinnati and Indianapolis R.R. The first regular college class entered in 1824, though the institution existed as a grammar school as early as 1808. It was supported chiefly by a fund derived from a State grant, and was, therefore, non-sectarian. In 1872 the University was reorganized, being divided into seven separate schools, viz. : that of the Latin Language and Literature, the Greek Language and Literature, Modern Languages and English Philology, Pure Mathematics, Mixed Mathematics, Chemistry and Geology, Philosophy and Literature. Candidates for the degree of A.B. were required to complete the course in all the schools, but all students possessed entire liberty in the choice of their studies. The plan was never fully tried, as the college suspended the following year. At that time the faculty consisted of Pres. Andrew D. Hepburn and seven professors. The undergraduates numbered about eighty, exclusive of some thirty or forty in the Preparatory Department.

Five Greek Letter Fraternities had Chapters : Alpha Delta Phi, established 1835 ; Beta Theta Pi, 1839 ; Phi Delta Theta, 1848 ; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 1852 ; Delta Upsilon, 1868. It is hoped by its friends that the University will be reopened in 1885.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF MIAMI CHAPTER.

By ALFRED AUGUSTUS LOVETT, MIAMI, '73.

For some years previous to the year 1867 there were quite a number of gentlemen in Miami University who had not connected themselves with any one of the numerous secret fraternities of the college, preferring to remain alone rather than accept the principles of those orders. In this number there were men of the brightest scholarship that the college afforded, and they were alike respected by faculty and students. They were not to be classed among that rabble which we find more or less numerous in all colleges, who are "independents" from necessity; but they were men who stood well in both class and hall, and preferred by selection to remain alone, under the circumstances. There are numerous ambitions which the student can only reach through certain means, and often our men were compelled to see their rights invaded by those far less worthy, from the fact only that he was supported by an organization that gave him what his merits would never win. Feeling the necessity of mutual protection and the benefits of combined organization, some of our men were looking about them with the hopes of accomplishing that end by some organization that would give them the desired benefits, without the objectionable features, of the societies which were then prominent in the college. To this end they labored for some time without success. It was during this time that there came to the college one Mr. J. M. Robinson. Mr. Robinson was a quiet, unassuming man, but at once gave evidence of character and culture that won for him the esteem of all with whom he came in contact. Seeing the drift of affairs he soon entered into fellowship with the independent class, and succeeded in interesting them in the history and work of anti-secrecy, in which cause he had for some months previously labored as a member of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity. The result of his labors was, that by March, 1868, there was organized the Miami Chapter of Delta Fraternity, with six charter members, which number was increased to thirteen by the last of June. From that time forward the Chapter took an enviable stand among the fraternities represented at Miami University. The membership of the Chapter increased from its organization, and at all times was equal to any in the college, and at all times composed of the best scholarship that the institution afforded. The Miami Chapter sustained herself throughout the history of the university, and when, in 1873, from financial inability, the institution was compelled to close her doors, of the five students from the last graduating class who were distinguished for their scholarship three were members of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY.

The Cornell University was founded April 14, 1865, by the Hon. Ezra Cornell, with Andrew Dickson White as its first President. Its faculty at that time consisted of twenty-eight professors, and has since been increased to forty-eight professors, besides eight instructors. It is non-sectarian, but on Sunday, during the fall and spring terms, the pulpit in Sage Chapel is filled by the ablest ministers of all denominations throughout the country. Its buildings are beautifully located on a campus about five hundred feet above Cayuga Lake, and are nine in number, namely: Morrill Hall, White Hall, the McGraw Building, the Sibley Building, the Sage College, the Sage Chapel, the Cascadilla, the Physical and Chemical Building, and the Engineering Building, — all of brick or stone, except the last. The total number of students for the year 1883-84 was four hundred and sixty-one. The publications of the students are, the Sun, a daily; the Era, a weekly; and the Review, a monthly. The annual is the Cornellian, published by the Junior class.

The Greek Letter societies at Cornell are Zeta Psi, 1868; Kappa Alpha, 1868; Alpha Delta Phi, 1868; Delta Upsilon, 1869; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 1870; Theta Delta Chi, 1870; Beta Theta Pi, 1874; Psi Upsilon, 1876. The ladies' societies are Kappa Alpha Theta, 1881; and Kappa Kappa Gamma, 1883.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF CORNELL CHAPTER.

By NORTON T. HERR, '82.

Within a few months after the opening of Cornell University, in 1868, the secret-society system was in full operation, leading, as usual, to jealousy and exclusiveness. The first effort made to counteract these undesirable social influences resulted in the formation of the "Independent Organization," a short-lived embodiment of negative principles, which accomplished little except the drawing of ridicule upon its members. After the decided failure of this organization the opportunities afforded by the size and popularity of the new university attracted the attention of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity. But it was not until the spring of 1869 that the evils against which Delta Upsilon then raised her banners assumed such proportions at Cornell as to warrant the foundation of a Chapter. One of the leaders of the extinct "Independent Organization" was Mr. G. F. Behringer, '69, a Delta Upsilon from the University of the City of N. Y. ; and it was through him that all investigations were made. Hardly daring to hope for success, he was urged on and aided by other Chapters, until it was definitely decided to make the attempt. The necessary assent was gladly granted by the Fraternity at large. Finally, representatives of the Hamilton and Rochester Chapters came to Ithaca to coöperate with Mr. Behringer. Men were chosen by them and pledged to support the enterprise. On Monday, May 17, 1869, the formal organization took place ; the affirmation of allegiance was administered, and the Cornell Chapter entered upon its career with a roll of seven members.

From the first intimation that such an organization had been effected, enemies and opponents rose up on all sides, but especially among secret-society men, and among those who felt slighted at receiving no invitation to join. From the columns of the college paper a tirade of abuse was directed against the new enterprise, but its absurdity and virulence were so extreme that it helped, rather than retarded, the progress of Delta Upsilon. The public discussion of the merits of the new society was closed by an article from Mr. Behringer, refuting some of the more personal attacks. Since then no expression of the attitude of the secret societies towards Delta Upsilon has appeared in print.

Before the close of the college year 1868-69 the original condition of the Chapter had materially improved. The number of membership had increased to fourteen; one of the most popular professors accepted honorary membership, as evincing his sympathy with the movement; and, moreover, there was a general reaction against the evils of secret societies, the benefits of which accrued to Delta Upsilon. The election of a Delta Upsilon to the board of Era editors, outside support, and the spirit of the men themselves, warranted the belief, expressed at the end of the year, "that a telling blow had been struck for truth and right in the university."

The history of the Chapter from this time on may be divided into three periods:—

I. That of growth and prosperity, 1869-76.

II. That of rapid decline, 1876-78.

III. That of rise and recovery, 1878 to date.

I. Growth and prosperity. The lack of a constitution and by-laws was soon remedied by the kindness of sister Chapters and the energy of Mr. Behringer. The by-laws have since undergone constant alteration; but the constitution, with slight change, remained in force until its thorough revision in January, 1882. Another obstacle to progress was the lack of a hall for meeting purposes; but, from October, 1869, when a society room was first hired, the Chapter has always had a neatly furnished and pleasant Chapter-hall. The financial needs during these first years were met by initiation taxes, special taxes, proceeds of entertainments, and temporary loans. A piano was purchased in 1874.

The literary programmes presented a great variety of matter, and it was not until 1876 that the regular exercises assumed their present simple, but ample, composition. Quarterly meetings of some literary attractiveness were made public to friends of the members. For a while very little attention was paid to anything but the literary work; but, through the influence of the piano, and through the natural growth of intimacy between the members, social intercourse became more prominent. Scholarship culminated in 1874. Since then that has not been the only requisite of eligibility, and the general average of excellence has been lowered, although still acknowledgedly superior to that of rival societies. Breaches of morality were very infrequent among the members, and, though their general tone and style have since largely changed, the same stricture against anything unmanly exists to-day. The introduction of the severely competitive system of "rushing" for new members compelled certain gradual changes in the general tone and character of the men, — being selected, as a rule, more than formerly, from the popular and well-to-do class of students. It was also during the early years that the few honorary members were elected.

It was in the year 1872 that the true fraternal feeling began to develop. The intimate associations between members at the meetings extended to the class-room and to every portion of their daily lives. They were raised out of their literary rut, and in external affairs put more upon the same basis with the other societies. The most flattering event of this period was the successful entertainment of the Fraternity Convention, in the fall of 1876. It may be considered not only as the culminating point, but as the last great event indicative of prosperity, for one of the most vital principles of the organization was already being neglected. To external view the Chapter was never upon a surer footing. It had rented a Chapter-house, which occupied a prominent position in the village; its members were zealous and of high standing as men and students. Alas, the downfall of its seeming prosperity was but too imminent!

II. Rapid decline. Some of the members thought that the element of tone was neglected, and they deemed it practicable to form a society combining the leading spirits of all the Cornell societies then existing. In fact a conspiracy was fostered, and in a few months took as many different shapes. Exciting scenes and deep plotting were the order of the day as soon as it leaked out that the intentions of the dissenters were earnest. The affair culminated in the expulsion of one member, and in the accepted resignations of five others, at the time, and of two more during the next year. The story of this hard struggle for existence belongs rather to the pages of the record-book than to this sketch. We should let all such unpleasant memories drop away with the lapse of time; but, in leaving the subject, it is no more than just to say that the preservation of the Chapter was largely due to a single individual, — Prof. W. R. Dudley. He led the faithful members in every emergency, and spared neither time, expense, nor his personal feelings in securing the survival of the Chapter.

The bitterness and despondency growing out of this trouble continued to hamper the healthy progress of the society for fully two years, until finally her enemies were silenced by their graduation, and her drooping spirits refreshed by new successes. 1877–78 was a gloomy year, and the only redemption lay in the untiring efforts of the graduate members to reinvigorate the Chapter.

III. Rise and recovery. In the spring of 1878 Ames won the only honor in the college, — the Woodford prize for oratory. This victory seemed to herald the coming of a new era, and to give the disheartened members new courage. One strove to improve the literary exercises; another strove in society and politics to show that Delta Upsilon was not yet a thing of the past. Old features were reformed; new ones introduced. Every man seemed imbued with the same spirit, — a spirit which grew until a perfect unity of purpose and principle was attained in the fall of 1881. Now there exists an intimacy of association between the individual members that is highly commendable. Small, but compact; modest, but powerful, Delta Upsilon can congratulate herself that she is upon a firm basis, and that everything points to an increasing and gratifying prosperity. Already is the word, "Chapter-house," of frequent suggestion. Among the various recent events that are significant of present and future prosperity may be mentioned the change of halls in 1881, when a well-appointed room of good location was secured; the further change, in 1883, into a suite of rooms in a favorably situated block; the adoption of an enlightened political policy, whereby a blind opposition to all the secret societies no longer cripples its political undertakings; the celebration of the tenth anniversary of foundation, which inspired the active members with fresh vigor, and the graduate members with fresh confidence and regard; and the organization of a Chapter library in 1882, that speedily assumed respectable proportions. In 1882 was also founded "The Cornell Delta Upsilon Association," incorporated under the State laws, and comprising as members every graduate and honorary member of the Chapter. Its object is to afford a stable auxiliary of the active Chapter, to render it all reasonable assistance, and to act as a trustee of a fund to be accumulated for the erection of a Chapter-house.

Another step in the same direction was taken in 1883, when the graduating class instituted a system of pledge subscriptions to secure a Chapter-house, hoping to find the plan as successful eventually as it proved to be in the case of the Madison Chapter.

It can safely be asserted that the Cornell Chapter, at the close of the college year 1883-84, was in as prosperous and satisfactory condition as it had been during any year of its existence, and, if the hopes and expectations, the spirit and energy, of the active members be adopted as a criterion, its present prosperity exceeds that of any previous year. Everything done by the members of the Cornell Chapter of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity is well and earnestly done, from their work in the class-room to their exertions in college politics; from the literary exercises in the Chapter-hall to their parting chant, "Vive la Delta U.!"

TRINITY COLLEGE.

Trinity College in Hartford, Conn., under Protestant Episcopal control, was chartered as Washington College in 1823, and opened in 1824. The name was changed in 1845. It has property to the value of over a million dollars, a library of more than twenty thousand volumes, and a valuable cabinet.

In the year 1883-84 there were sixty-six students and fourteen professors.

Following is a list of the Greek Letter Fraternities which are represented at Trinity College : Phi Beta Kappa, 1829 ; Iota Kappa Alpha, 1829 ; Delta Psi, 1850 ; Psi Upsilon, 1879 ; and Delta Kappa Epsilon, 1879.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF TRINITY CHAPTER.

The Trinity Chapter was organized some little time after the opening of the collegiate year 1869-70, chiefly through the exertions of Robert C. Hindley, of the class of '72, now professor in Racine College, Racine, Wis. The Chapter organized with a membership of eleven active and three honorary members; it was at the height of its prosperity in 1872-73, and ceased to exist in 1875-76.

Badges were first openly worn at morning chapel, February 22, 1870. Up to that time the fact of the existence of the new society in Trinity had been kept secret, though several members of the college were heard to say that "they had suspected that something of the sort was on foot."

The time seemed auspicious for the new Chapter. The secret societies of the college were divided into two factions, nearly equal in numbers, and Delta Upsilon held the balance of power in "college politics." Under such circumstances it was easy to compel recognition, and the Chapter, accordingly, entered into an alliance with one of the two parties above alluded to, securing, thereby, a promise of representation upon the editorial staff of the college paper and an equitable proportion of college offices.

Meantime a pleasant suite of rooms had been leased and partially furnished for the meetings of the Chapter, and the membership considerably increased. The meetings were, from the first, much like those of a debating club. The two literary societies in the college were thus moribund, and the members of the Delta Upsilon eagerly embraced the new opportunity for practice in debate and composition. The society was thus, for a while, of real and lasting benefit to those who attended its meetings. It should be added, in this connection, that great interest in the meetings was manifested by three gentlemen in the city of Hartford who had accepted elections as honorary members of the Chapter.

Thus the launch of the new craft was achieved with a fair measure of success. The causes which led to the decadence and death of the Chapter were various.

Of course its existence was more or less of a threat to the secret societies, and their hostility was evident from the first. The inexperience of the first members also contributed largely to their lack of success. Unfamiliarity with the methods by which preparatory schools are "worked," and sub-freshmen "pledged," put Delta Upsilon at a decided disadvantage in the contest for supremacy. To these should be added, in the opinion of the writer, a decided inconsistency in the attitude of the Chapter itself. Organized as an open society, and in protest against the methods and principles of secret societies, it nevertheless was, to all intents and purposes, a secret society from the first. The place of its meetings and the transactions thereat, the names of new members, and the whole of the internal organization of the Chapter, were secret in the same way and to the same degree that similar matters in the case of the common Greek-letter societies are secret. Moreover, the alliance with secret societies at "college elections," while, to all appearance, politic and beneficial at first, tended to place Delta Upsilon in an indefensible position; so, by degrees, the enterprise failed, and the Chapter succumbed to adverse influences.

Within a few months after the graduation of the class of 1873 there were only two standard-bearers left; all harmonious action and effort ceased; unworthy members deserted the ranks; badges were no longer worn; the Chapter languished, and, with the year 1875-76, ceased to exist.

MARIETTA COLLEGE.

Marietta College is situated in the town of Marietta, Ohio, which lies at the mouth of the Muskingum river, one of the largest northern tributaries of the Ohio. Originally, in 1832, the institution was chartered as "The Marietta Collegiate Institute and Western Teachers Seminary;" but February 14, 1835, the Legislature granted a new charter under its present name, and conferred collegiate powers and functions.

The educational work of the college was carried on until 1850 in a single building of very moderate dimensions. There are now three in the college, and one used exclusively for preparatory instruction. The library numbers about thirty-one thousand five hundred volumes. The number of students in 1883-84 was sixty-one in the college proper, and ninety in the Preparatory Department. The number of professors in the college was nine.

The Sophomores publish an annual, — The Mariettian. The two literary societies, Alpha Kappa and Psi Gamma, issue the College Olio.

The following Greek Letter Fraternities are represented at Marietta: Phi Gamma Delta, established in 1855; Alpha Digamma, 1859; Alpha Sigma Phi, 1860; Delta Upsilon, 1870; and Phi Beta Kappa.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF MARIETTA CHAPTER.

For years prior to the organization and admission of the Delta Upsilon there had been a band of moral, upright, and talented students, who had, judging of secrecy by the examples around them, condemned the existing secret organizations in Marietta College, and had resolved not to lend their names and influence to that which, to their observation, resulted in no permanent good. They were men of stamina as well as men of brain; they were not to be influenced by a name.

Prominent among them were G. H. Pond, valedictorian of '66; A. W. Williams, third-honor man of '69; S. J. Hathaway, '69, and John Sylvanus; and, later, Frank Kelsey and William Payne. It was natural for these men to associate together, and at one of their impromptu gatherings it was resolved to form an "open society," as they termed it, in opposition to secrecy, in which all persons might enjoy the benefits of brotherhood without the evils of secret oaths; accordingly G. H. Pond addressed a letter to "any open society" of Yale College. The letter fell into the kind hands of C. W. Bardeen, a member of the Gamma Nu, an open society for Freshmen only, and devoted to literary exercises. An answer was obtained May 16, 1866, which showed the impracticability of an alliance with a strictly Freshman society. This died the first attempt of Marietta men to form a society opposed to the oaths of secrecy.

In 1870, A. W. Williams, then a graduate, and a student for the ministry, met Josiah H. Strong, of Western Reserve College, at Lane Seminary.

While they were talking about their respective colleges Williams spoke of the societies, and of their former effort to establish an open society. Strong, in his impulsive way, said, "You want a Chapter of Delta Upsilon at Marietta;" and he kindly gave Mr. Williams a catalogue of the Fraternity, which he forwarded to Mr. Hathaway, a graduate and law-student residing in Marietta. The catalogue was passed over to Messrs. Kelsey and Payne, still undergraduates. A list of ten pledged men was the result of their work. Not feeling secure in breasting the secret societies alone, they went into the Academy, and pledged four men of the incoming Freshman class. Numbering fourteen men, they made application, through Western Reserve Chapter, to be admitted into the Delta Upsilon Fraternity. On the evening of the 23d of April, 1870, the Chapter was formally organized, and the members initiated by Marcus Cozad, of Western Reserve. The thirty-sixth annual convention met under the auspices of Brown Chapter, at Providence, R. I. On motion, Mr. Grant, of Western Reserve, presented the interests of the proposed Chapter at Marietta to the convention.

The report was adopted.

A letter from Mr. Hathaway was read, stating that ten more men were ready to be initiated.

Western Reserve was given the power to establish the Chapter. In June, 1870, M. E. Cozad, of Western Reserve, arrived at Marietta, and formally set the infant Chapter on its feet.

Dr. Nelson, of Lane Seminary, was engaged to deliver his famous oration on "True Eloquence" to the Chapter, in the Congregationalist church of Marietta, on the evening of the 18th day of June. The matter had been carried on so quietly that not until Mr. Cozad appeared on the campus was there any suspicion aroused among the secret societies, and not until the posters were up, announcing the lecture by Dr. Nelson, was the true inwardness of the matter disclosed.

Then the opposition broke out in wild fury, and the Delta Upsilon boys awoke to find every bill pulled down. They were speedily re-posted, and the boys stood guard around with heavy canes, and spoiling for a fight; but their enemies had respect for their muscle and valor, so that hostilities ceased for a time.

The new Fraternity soon earned the respect of the faculty, and the friendship of the citizens of the town. It carried off the second honor in the graduating class at the following Commencement; first prizes in the Freshmen for scholarship and declamation.

After the first attack by the combined forces of secret societies had been successfully resisted, each society attempted to combat the new and unwelcome rival; now, it would be the arrows of scorn hurled from one society, which were easily turned by the broad shield of fact; again, it would be persecution from the other societies in the shape of scurrilous, and sometimes blasphemous, handbills, attacking the personal character of members in particular and of the society in general.

These would be posted on bill-boards, distributed in chapel and on the street.

The Delta Upsilon boys met these attacks, as they should, by silence; knowing well that vituperation and abuse alone are not arguments, and cannot harm, but, like a boomerang that is illy thrown, miss their object, and, rebounding, strike the thrower.

In one year the secret societies were willing to make overtures of peace to Delta Upsilon, and to admit her members to full fellowship in the literary societies.

From that time there was a struggle to gain the good-will of Delta Upsilon. A fair distribution of officers was made. Delta Upsilon held the balance of power. The opposition of the enemies had made them the favorites in the town; they were established, and had come to stay.

Matters went on thus for a number of years. The Chapter marked out her policy and strictly pursued it, aiming at a high moral standing and sociability among its members rather than the highest scholarship. Hence, though a student stood at the head of his class in scholarship, he was never solicited unless he was supposed to possess high moral sentiments, and those elements of sociability necessary to a successful brotherhood. Delta Upsilon has, as a society, always been in the lead in working for reform in college life, allying herself with a secret society when, by doing so, it was possible to establish a good precedent in the literary societies. In the year 1879 opposition broke out anew against Delta Upsilon at Marietta, and resulted in a decree by the secret societies that Delta Upsilon must perish within two years. In the line of the decree the Delta Upsilon's hall was burglarized in the summer vacation. Instead of discouraging the Chapter this outrage fired them with greater zeal for the cause, and bound them into a closer brotherhood. Her prosperity increased up to the very limit of her allotted period of existence. About this time a fresh outburst was made, and more bills were imposed on a disgusted public. Again, in 1882, the hall was burglarized, and considerable property destroyed and stolen. On the heels of this followed a series of the most infamous handbills, which served only to elevate Delta Upsilon, and degrade the secret-society men. Nothing was done with regard to the burglary except to make it known to the public, and no reply was made to the handbills, as none was needed; for the perpetrators were already sufficiently punished by the low esteem in which they were held by the college and towns-people. At this writing, although Delta Upsilon has received a severe set-back by reason of a number of her best men leaving college, she holds her lead over the college societies in Marietta. Perseverance and forbearance work wonders.

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY.

Genesee College was founded at Lima, N. Y., in 1849. In 1871 the institution was removed to Syracuse, N. Y. Colleges of Fine Arts and Medicine were added, and the whole incorporated as Syracuse University. The plant of the University is estimated at $700,000. The campus contains fifty acres. The "Hall of Languages," situated on a hill south of the city, is a limestone building, erected at a cost of $200,000. The College of Medicine occupies a brick building on Orange street, worth $40,000. The corporation, also, owns the "University Block," on Railroad street, at present used for business purposes. There are nine courses of study in operation. The library contains twelve thousand volumes. The number of professors and instructors for the year 1883-84 was thirty-five; of students for the same year three hundred and ninety-three.

There are two papers published in the college,—the University Herald and the Syracusan. The college annual is called the Onondagan.

The following is a list of the Fraternities at present represented in Syracuse University: Delta Kappa Epsilon, established 1871; Delta Upsilon, 1873; Zeta Psi, 1875; Psi Upsilon, 1875; Phi Kappa Psi, 1884. There are also three Sororities, Alpha Phi, 1872; Gamma Phi Beta, 1874; and Kappa Kappa Gamma, 1883.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF SYRACUSE CHAPTER.

By HENRY ALLEN PECK, '85.

The Syracuse Chapter can scarcely be said to have a history. Its oldest alumni are but just beginning to acquire a reputation. Entering the University almost at the time of its foundation, the Chapter has experienced all its vicissitudes of fortune, and now partakes of its prosperity. Its men are scattered to the remotest parts of the United States, and some even in the Old World.

When Genesee College was removed to Syracuse and became Syracuse University, two local societies came in its wake. One of them, "The Mystic Seven," had at one time formed part of a Fraternity, which still survives at the University of Virginia and in an open society at Wesleyan University now bearing that name. The other society was called Upsilon Kappa, — a strong and influential organization, which had many prominent names in its alumni record. In 1871 "The Mystic Seven" became the Phi Gamma Chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon, while in 1875 Upsilon Kappa was received into the bosom of Psi Upsilon. Both have continued to flourish, and have bright prospects for the future.

In 1872 it became apparent that there was yet plenty of room for a good society. That fall, Frank Smalley, '74, and Edwin Nottingham, '76, in company of thirteen others, founded the Atticæum, — a society for literary work and general culture. Their meetings were held in the Myers block, on Genesee street, which was then used for university purposes, and were open to all who chose to attend. Reports of their exercises were printed in the college papers, on whose board they were soon given a representation.

Feeling the need of a closer bond, the thought of applying for admission to some Fraternity soon presented itself. At this time began a contest which nearly wrecked the hopes of the young Chapter. Some of the members were prejudiced in favor of a secret fraternity, while others were as bitterly opposed. Non-secrecy finally triumphed, and at the thirty-ninth annual convention, in 1873, the name of Syracuse was added to the list of Chapters of Delta Upsilon.

On the 14th of November, 1873, a committee from Madison University extended the hand of fellowship to seventeen members of the Atticæum. The new Chapter would have been strong if it had been united. The old troubles soon broke out, however, and resulted in the expulsion of some members and the withdrawal of others. Along with its domestic troubles the Chapter was harassed by persecutions of various kinds. These culminated in destruction of the Chapter property and the exclusion of its members from the board of the college paper.

For a time the meetings were held in the rooms of the members, but in the spring of 1874 Chapter rooms were furnished in the Pike block, on South Salina street. For over two years these were occupied by the Chapter, until the destruction of their contents, during the holiday recess of 1876-'77, by an act of vandalism, the like of which has too often brought disgrace upon the Greek-letter Fraternities. After this, quarters were prepared in the Rice block, where our home was until the spring of 1883.

Prior to 1878 the only paper published in the college had been the University Herald. The editorial and publishing boards of this paper were elected by the students, and were so arranged that all the fraternities had a share in its management. During the spring and summer of 1878 an arrangement was made by which Delta Upsilon was to be excluded. The publication of the Herald was suspended, a new board was organized, and a new paper was issued under the patronage of the secret fraternities. It was expected that the influence of the Chapter must decline immediately. The change of name left one avenue of escape. A board of Delta Upsilon resurrected the Herald, and it has been in our control ever since. It has always paid its own expenses, and for the past three years has had a handsome surplus in its treasury at the end of the year. As a means of education it has been invaluable to the members of the Chapter, few leaving at the end of their four years' course without having been members of the board.

In the spring of 1883 the Chapter was incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, by the title of the "Delta Upsilon Society of Syracuse." This was mainly for convenience, as legal questions had arisen concerning the Chapter property. The Chapter also has begun to look forward to the time when it shall be under "its own vine and fig-tree."

The temper of the Syracuse Chapter has always been conservative, yet not so conservative as to prevent a bold stroke of policy when necessary. To our order of literary exercises we have always rigidly adhered, although the social element has not been neglected. The three principles of morality, scholarship, and social culture have been the foundations of our work.

THE COLLEGE OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

The College of the City of New York, originally entitled Free Academy, was established in 1848, by the Board of Education of the City of New York, in accordance with an Act of the State, passed May 7, 1847, and ratified by a vote of the people of the city, June 9, 1846. The first class entered January, 1849, and was graduated in July, 1854. In 1854 the Legislature gave the institution collegiate powers and privileges so far as pertained to the conferring upon its graduates the usual collegiate degrees and diplomas in the arts and sciences. In 1866 its name was changed, by an Act of the Legislature, to the College of the City of New York. In the year 1882 the Legislature removed the restrictions which made one year's attendance at the public schools of the city a requisite for admission. Instruction, as well as the use of text-books, is without expense to the students. The Library of the College contains about twenty thousand volumes. In the year 1882-83 there were in the four higher classes three hundred and twenty-six students and thirty-one instructors.

There are the following societies represented in the College of the City of New York: Alpha Delta Phi, founded in 1855; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 1856; Phi Gamma Delta, 1865; Delta Beta Phi, 1878; Theta Delta Chi, 1881; Phi Delta Theta, 1884.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF MANHATTAN CHAPTER.

BY EUGENE D. BAGAN, NEW YORK, '76.

During the summer vacation of 1873 it occurred to two students of the Sophomore class of the College of the City of New York to organize a league on their return to college. The object in forming this league was to combat the methods and tactics then in vogue with the secret fraternities having Chapters at the institution. The fraternities then represented at the college by their Chapters were, in the order of their establishment, Alpha Delta Phi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, and Phi Gamma Delta.

Just prior to the end of the vacation, and before the idea had been suggested to any others, these would-be organizers of the league heard that there was already in existence an organization, anti-secret in spirit, extending throughout the different colleges, and that a Chapter of this Fraternity was then existing at the New York University, under the title of the New York Chapter.

They also became aware that a mutual friend was a member of this Chapter. Without delay they communicated with their friend, who was at this time out of the city, received all the necessary information, and arranged for an interview. The fall term had scarcely begun when the promoters of the scheme, with their number augmented by one,— thus making three,— met four members of the New York Chapter, and consulted as to prospects and plans.

At the meeting it was decided that a dozen or so of the most desirable neutrals of the City College should be induced to interest themselves in the matter, and that then an application would be forwarded for admission into the Fraternity.

In accordance with this determination, and during the spring term of 1874, an open league was formed, and an application requesting admission as a Chapter of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity was presented by the New York Chapter at the annual convention, held during May, 1874, at Marietta, Ohio.

Although a similar application, which had been refused, had been made by students of the same college some years before, yet in this instance, as those applying had become known to the members of the New York Chapter, and as during the previous six months ample opportunity to become better acquainted had been afforded both sides, the men at the university and their would-be brothers at the college; thus the delegates of the Chapter presenting the application succeeded, after considerable opposition, in obtaining the authority to form the college Chapter.

New York, Rutgers, and Hamilton Chapters were appointed to wed the league to the Fraternity, under the name of the Manhattan Chapter.

The new organization started under most brilliant prospects; a fifth-honor man, two other Commencement orators, two prize speakers, — one of whom won the prize, — besides two others who took medals, being among those who wore the pin at the Commencement of 1874.

During the next two years progress in maintaining the footing thus obtained was slow. The members did not have the man among them, so necessary in all Chapters, particularly so in a new Chapter, who will take upon himself to push matters in the way of becoming acquainted with the entering students, and in the way of explaining the objects of his organization.

The members of the Chapter saw the desirable men going into the other fraternities, while they stood meekly by, without making the least endeavor to change the course matters were taking. In the New York College there are a plenty of students, but the number from which the fraternities care to select is small when compared with the other educational institutions.

Thus, solely from inactivity and the want of a proper leader, desirable members were lost to the Chapter, and, rather than sustain life with the undesirable, it was decided to become enrolled as a dead Chapter.

There is, however, one circumstance which calls for particular mention in the matter of the existence of Delta Upsilon in New York City at two institutions at the same time. It is this: that, although the New York and Manhattan Chapters were in existence under different names and as two separate Chapters, still, in reality, they were but one Chapter, occupying the same rooms, meeting together and fraternizing as members of one and the same organization. This, of course, was as it should be, and is what makes us all so proud of our dear old Delta Upsilon.

THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN.

The University of Michigan, situated at Ann Arbor, dates its origin almost from the territorial organization of the State in 1805. At that time Congress conveyed a township of land for its endowment, which grant was afterwards revoked and two entire townships substituted, from which was realized about $450,000, giving a yearly income from this source of nearly $21,000, besides which the Legislature provides for a sum sufficient to maintain the institution. The erection of the buildings began in 1838, and the first class was graduated in 1845, consisting of eleven men, who received the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

During the collegiate year 1883-84 there were, in the several departments, one thousand three hundred and seventy-seven students and eighty-nine members of the faculties. In 1883, thirty eight years after the first class graduated, there were four hundred and fifty-two who received degrees, the number of departments having increased in that time from one to six, as follows: Department of Literature, Science, and the Arts; School of Pharmacy; Department of Medicine and Surgery; College of Dental Surgery; Department of Law; and Homœopathic Medical College.

The general supervision of the University is vested in a Board of Regents, eight in number, elected by the people.

Of college publications there are four, — The Palladium, issued annually by the secret societies; The Oracle, also an annual, issued by the Sophomore class; The Chronicle, published fortnightly, and The Argonaut, published weekly.

The secret societies at present existing among the students are Chi Psi Chapter, founded in 1845; Alpha Delta Phi, in 1846; Delta Kappa Epsilon, in 1853; Sigma Phi, in 1858; Zeta Psi, in 1858; Psi Upsilon, in 1864; Phi Delta Phi, in 1869; Beta Theta Pi, in 1845, reestablished in 1875; Phi Kappa Psi, in 1876; Sigma Chi, in 1877; Kappa Alpha Theta, in 1879; Gamma Phi Beta, in 1882.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF MICHIGAN CHAPTER.

By WINTHROP BURR CHAMBERLAIN, MICHIGAN, '84.

At the convention of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, held in the spring of 1875, it was determined to make an effort at western extension. A careful examination of the field made it clear that the University of Michigan was by far the most promising institution in the West for the planting of a new Chapter; and it was accordingly voted that the work should be undertaken by a committee of Chapters, with Rochester at its head. Operations were not immediately commenced; but, in the spring of the following year, Messrs. George W. Coon and E. Clare Dodge, both Rochester, '76, visited Ann Arbor as a committee of their own Chapter to do the work assigned it by the convention. The task of establishing a Chapter in the Collegiate Department of an institution which already supported eight fraternities was by no means an easy one, but it was rendered doubly difficult by the fact that still another secret organization had just been established, and the most desirable upper-classmen had been taken. The visitors, however, nothing daunted, went energetically to work, and soon succeeded in getting several upper-classmen interested; the interest, however, was short-lived, and suddenly died out. Mr. Coon, however, persevered, and, redoubling his exertions upon the underclassmen, finally gathered about him a fine body of men. '79 was a particularly strong class, and Mr. Coon's energy secured a fine Freshman delegation; '78, too, was an excellent class, and furnished the foundation for the new Chapter; but '76 and '77 were found to be sterile as far as Delta Upsilon was concerned. Several preliminary meetings were held under Mr. Coon's direction, and on the evening of Monday, April 10, 1876, the initiation of the charter members, and the organization of the Michigan Chapter of Delta Upsilon, took place in Room No. 11 of the Cook House. There were eight men initiated at this meeting, as follows: from '78, Watson D. Hinckley, William L. Jenks, and John B. Johnson; from '79, Fred S. Bell, James S. Bishop, Jerry W. Jenks, Jesse F. Millspaugh, and Wilmot S. Pennington.

The next morning the new Chapter "swung," much to the chagrin of certain upper-classmen who had been left out. Naturally there was much opposition from the older Chapters, and in less than two weeks a fiery onslaught upon the new departure appeared in The Chronicle. The infant was a sturdy one, however, and the intemperate attacks of jealous enemies, so far from stunting its growth, imparted new strength, and raised up friends, who took up the cudgels in its behalf. By the end of the year six men had been added to the original eight, and there seemed to be no obstacle to growing prosperity.

The bark which had thus been launched with so much difficulty was not destined, however, to meet with continual fair weather; its course often lay over perilous and stormy seas, and once or twice it was very nearly stranded on the shoals of contention. An anti-secret society was impossible at Michigan; as a charter member expressed it, "there was no use in flying a banner of anti-anything." While the Fraternity at large nominally held to anti-secrecy, the Michigan Chapter, in common with, perhaps, most of the other Chapters, was, in reality, non-secret. This was a fruitful source of trouble and dispute; some members did not like to sail under what they chose to term "false colors." The Chapter sent six delegates to the Madison Convention in '78, and some of them, on their way home, visited the Cornell Chapter, where the intestine war of "anti" and "non" was raging fiercely. The effect on the minds of some of the delegates, already predisposed in that direction, was bad, and soon led to an open rupture at Michigan. In the class of '80 the disaffection became alarming, and an effort was made to carry the Chapter over bodily to some secret fraternity; but the charter-members stood firm; several of the most disaffected were allowed to resign, and the crisis was safely passed. At the Brown Convention, in '80, the change from "anti" to "non" — so vital to the life of Delta Upsilon at Michigan — was made, largely through the efforts of the Michigan delegation. There is but little to record from this time on in the history of the Chapter but continued prosperity. In September, 1882, the Chapter rented the house at No. 28 Jefferson street, which it still holds. In October of the same year the forty-eighth convention of the Fraternity was entertained by the Chapter. In college matters the Michigan Chapter has, from its inception, taken a prominent part. In the support of athletics, the college press, and other student enterprises, it has never been behind its rivals. During the first five years of the Chapter's existence Delta Upsilon furnished five editors and three managing editors to The Chronicle. When the struggle over the control of that journal, in the spring of 1881, made a new paper necessary, Delta Upsilon was among the foremost in the founding of The Michigan Argonaut, to which it has since furnished two editors and one of them a managing editor. The Chapter has, however, owing to its non-secret principles, never succeeded in gaining editorial representation on The Palladium, an annual published by the secret societies.

The Michigan Chapter has always made good scholarship a prime requisite for membership, and as a result its reputation in the university has been very high, both with faculty and students. Prizes and the marking system are equally unknown in the university; but the common consensus of college opinion has awarded Delta Upsilon the palm in this respect, if in no other.

Weekly meetings were at first held in private rooms, but Adelpi Hall, and, later, Alpha Nu Hall, were rented for the use of the Chapter. These halls, which belonged to the moribund literary societies, soon proved unsatisfactory, and in the autumn of 1880 the present commodious hall, on Main street, was secured. The literary work of the Chapter has been an important feature of the weekly meetings from the start, and, although interest has occasionally flagged, the average has been unusually high. A feature peculiar, it is believed, to the Michigan Chapter is the occasional rendition of special programmes, to which the lady friends of the members are invited. Prominent among these special programmes may be mentioned the celebration of the anniversary of the Chapter's birth and Shakespeare's birthday— which are nearly coincident— by the reproduction entire of some one of the great dramatist's plays.

A Chapter-house fund is slowly growing, the nucleus having been formed by a bequest from Wilmot S. Pennington, '79. It is hoped that a commodious home for the Chapter can be built before many years.

Up to the present time there have been seventy-six men initiated, giving an average of nearly eight to a class. The average size of the Chapter is twenty-six, which is also the present number.

In conclusion the historian's indebtedness to Mr. Robert G. Morrow, '83, of Portland, Oregon, should be acknowledged. Mr. Morrow was the first historian of the Chapter, and has, at the expense of no little time and trouble, compiled a very complete and accurate history of the Michigan Chapter. The present historian has used the materials thus collected very freely, and wishes to make his acknowledgments therefor.

THE NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY.

The organization of the Northwestern University was effected June 14, 1851. On Aug. 31, 1853, the founders purchased three hundred and eighty acres of land upon the shore of Lake Michigan, twelve miles north of Chicago, where they located a village, and called it Evanston, after one of their own number.

The departments of the university are: the College of Liberal Arts; the Art Department; the Woman's College; Conservatory of Music; School of Elocution; Swedish Theological Seminary; the Preparatory School; Garrett Biblical Institute, which is on the same campus, but is under an independent government; and the Chicago Medical College, and the Union College of Law, which are situated in Chicago. The campus is about thirty acres in extent. The buildings are valued at $263,000, and the endowment at $1,184,048. Garrett Biblical Institute has a building worth $50,000, and an endowment of $300,000.

The College of Liberal Arts was opened to students in November, 1855, and the first class of five members graduated June 30, 1859. The number of professors in all departments is sixty-five, and the total number of students present in 1883-84 was eight hundred and forty-seven. The presidents have been the Rev. Drs. C. T. Hinman, R. S. Foster, E. O. Haven, C. H. Fowler, Joseph Cummings, all of whom have been honored in the M. E. Church, and three of them have been elected to the office of bishop.

The name of the college paper is The Northwestern, and it is published on alternate weeks during the college year. The annual is called Pandora.

Eight Greek Letter Fraternities are represented in the college: Phi Kappa Psi, 1864 and 1878; Phi Kappa Sigma, 1873; Sigma Chi, 1869; Beta Theta Pi, 1873; Delta Upsilon, 1880; Alpha Phi, 1881; Delta Gamma, 1882; Kappa Kappa Gamma, 1882.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF NORTHWESTERN CHAPTER.

The history of the organization of this Chapter is closely identified with the history of the class of '81 of the Northwestern University. This class, laboring under the impression that the college secret societies in Northwestern were injurious to the college, detrimental to the moral character of their members, and unfair to the outsiders, determined, upon entering college, to unitedly oppose the secret societies, destroy their political influence, and, if possible, drive them from the college. For the first two years of their college course the class held well together, but in the Junior year their ranks were considerably depleted by the secession of some of the strongest fighters to the secret societies. While affairs were in this condition several members of the class, giving up the contest as hopeless, determined to organize another society to offset the influence of the secret societies. and reading, in Baird's "Manual," a secret-society man's account of Delta Upsilon, they decided to correspond with that Fraternity. Mr. P. H. Swift, who was appointed to that task at the first meeting, immediately corresponded with the Michigan Chapter, asking simply for information. He received a reply, that the Fraternity, at the last convention, had resolved to try and establish a Chapter at Northwestern University. Mr. Simonds, an alumnus of Michigan, living in Chicago, came up to Evanston and gave the necessary information, which resulted in the establishment of the Chapter two weeks later. Feb. 18, 1880, Mr. Simonds and Mr. Jones, an active member of the Michigan Chapter, organized the Northwestern Chapter of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, by administering the Fraternity pledge to the following gentlemen: John C. Butcher, W. R. Chamberlain, Jos. M. Cormack, N. C. Miller, Fred Porter, P. H. Swift, of '81; W. A. Evans, N. J. Harkness, P. D. Middlekauff, R. H. Pooley, of '82; A. C. Smith, A. E. Hills, of '83; and Nimrod F. Jenkins, '84. Mr. R. A. McPherrin, '82, was unavoidably out of town, and was not initiated until the next meeting.

The advent of the new Fraternity took the student community by surprise, and awakened a little malignant opposition. But Delta Upsilon quietly took her position in college, and was immediately acknowledged the peer of the older societies. Of course it has not been all ease and pleasure; it required a year and a half, and two changes, before the society secured a satisfactory hall. They are now very pleasantly situated, with a good-sized, comfortably furnished room. The society suffered during the first few years of its history, because its members were ignorant of the various tactics ordinarily resorted to, to secure new men. The members were determined to take in none but the best men; but opinions differed widely as to what constituted the best men: it was not scholarship alone; it was not religious or moral character alone; it was not social standing alone; but it was such a combination of these three as is rarely found; and so the members differed in their opinion as to the availability of a candidate according as each one overrated the importance of either of the three qualifications. And it was not until they had lost many good men, and been taught by hard experience, that they ceased to look for perfection in Freshmen, and adopted a reasonable requirement. At the present time the society seeks for its membership men of good moral character, — it will take no other, — also it requires that the candidate shall be of an agreeable disposition, a good student, and a man likely to be a benefit to the Fraternity, the college, and the world.

The history of the Chapter is so brief that little can be shown in the way of statistics. The members of the Chapter have taken a fair share of prizes and other college honors. Its alumni are few and recent, yet three of them are pastors in Chicago: Rev. P. H. Swift, '81, being appointed to Centenary M. E. Church, the largest Methodist Church in Chicago, the year of his graduation from the Theological Seminary; the Rev. Fred. Porter, '81, is pastor of Lincoln-street M. E. Church; and the Rev. N. J. Harkness, '82, of Indiana-street M. E. Church, Chicago; the Rev. R. H. Pooley is pastor of Oak Park M. E. Church; Mr. W. R. Chamberlain, '81, and P. S. Webster, '81, are practising law in Chicago; N. C. Miller, '81, is Superintendent of Public Schools of Longmont, Col.; and N. F. Jenkins, ex '84, is Superintendent of Public Schools of Kentland, Ind. The other alumni are occupying honorable positions, and doing good work in society.

The regular meetings of the Chapter are held every Monday evening during the college year. In the meetings the social idea predominates over the literary, all of the members belonging to the open college literary societies, and getting most of their literary drill in them. The Chapter was never so united as at the present time. never so well furnished with physical comforts, nor as strong in the lower classes. It has established its position in Northwestern, and, by a faithful adherence to Delta Upsilon principles, it hopes to retain what it has already attained.

HARVARD COLLEGE.

September 8, 1636, the General Court of Massachusetts Bay voted to give £400 for the endowment of a college to be situated in Newtown (afterwards called Cambridge). In spite of the zeal displayed, and the help promised, the design would not have been completed had it not been for the wholly unexpected and, for those days, munificent bequest of the Rev. John Harvard, who, two years later, bequeathed half his fortune (£780), and his whole library, three hundred volumes, to the infant college.

From this year, 1638, dates the establishment of Harvard College. Then began to flow that intellectual stream which, for nearly two centuries and a half, has continued to flow with an ever widening and deepening current. This earliest tribute to religion and science in the western world gave stable existence to the noble institution of to-day.

For the first fifty years of its existence the number of students rarely exceeded twenty; to-day there are fully fifteen hundred. The students now publish three papers,—The Advocate, Lampoon, and Daily Crimson.

Like the college itself the societies are of ancient date. The Institute was formed in 1770; the Hasty Pudding Club in 1795. These societies still hold first place in college circles, so that Greek Letter Fraternities have a small representation. Alpha Delta Phi was instituted in 1837; Beta Theta Pi, in 1839; Zeta Psi, in 1847; Omicron Kappa, in 1858; Delta Upsilon, in 1881.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF HARVARD CHAPTER.

BY A. L. HODGES, HARVARD, '83.

The Harvard Chapter of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity was instituted in December, 1880. Its membership in the beginning was small, and has always remained small. The large number of societies already existing at Harvard caused, at first, a feeling of doubt as to the need of a new one. But the fact that there was no society in the university occupying the same field as this, and offering the same advantages, especially to the lower classes, led to its establishment. At its first institution its membership was drawn from the Senior, Junior, and Sophomore classes, and it was not until later that Freshmen were admitted. The by-laws at first prohibited the admission of Freshmen until they had proved themselves worthy during several months' residence at college. This prohibition, however, was removed during the fall of 1881, and now all students in the college proper are eligible to membership. The number of members from each class not limited, but the total membership has never risen above thirty.

The meetings of the Chapter are held weekly. The Chapter at first did not own, or even rent, a room for its exclusive use, but held its meetings in rooms used also for other purposes. But recently the rooms of the Everett Athenæum have been secured, and the Chapter's meetings are held there. The aim of the Chapter, as it has been developed at Harvard, is chiefly literary. The social element is introduced, occasionally, in the form of suppers, spreads, etc.; but it does not form so large a part of this society as of many others.

One point in the working of the society, which has given general satisfaction, is the method of succession in office. We believe that a great object of our meetings, the business part, is training in parliamentary forms and usages. No other person is in a position to receive this training so well as the presiding officer. Accordingly we have adopted the plan of having short terms, and thus giving several members the opportunity of learning to preside. An election of officers is held on every sixth regular meeting, and no person can be elected to the same office for two terms in succession. Thus a man who joins the society early in his college course, and continues in it for four years, stands a very good chance of being president for one term, at least, before he graduates.

Like most similar societies our Chapter has had its dark periods. At the beginning of the academic year of 1882-83 it was in a particularly desperate condition. Its membership was then very small, and it had been crippled by the loss of its members from '82. Besides, the long summer vacation had weakened the interest and enthusiasm felt, so that the Chapter was nearly dead. But the courage and fortitude of a few members revived it. The dissatisfied members withdrew, and the society took a new lease of life. Fortunately it was able to secure some good men, especially from '85, and soon it began to elect from '86. Since that time it has continued to increase in members, interest, and influence, and at the close of the year 1883-84 it was in a more flourishing condition than at any other time since its first formation.

In presenting this "History of the Harvard Chapter of Delta Upsilon" I am fully aware that it is not a history at all, but merely a short essay. The fact is, that writing a history of an infant organization like this would be like writing the history of a three-year-old child. The account of the weaning of the child and of its first tooth would be interesting to the mother, but to very few others. But, as the child contains within itself the possibilities of history, so I trust does our Chapter. As it advances in age and influence I trust it may work out a history, which, related by some future historian, may reflect credit on the college in which the society exists and on the Fraternity. At present I hope that the few words which I have been able to write may serve to give a faint idea of this, the youngest chapter of the Fraternity in existence.

THE RESIDENCE DIRECTORY OF THE FRATERNITY.

The Residence Directory is arranged in the following order: first, the states and territories of the United States in their alphabetical order, and then the foreign countries. In each state or country the cities and towns, and the members of the Fraternity living in them, are arranged alphabetically. In all cities of over twenty thousand in population the addresses by street and number are given, and in some cities of smaller size. Only three signs are used to show the professions, — Rev., M D., and Law. The asterisk is put before the names of deceased members. The parallel is used, as in the rest of the book, to denote that at the time of the printing of the pages the address given had not been verified, and that for the latest information it would be well to consult the appendix. In a number of cases two addresses have been given, as the member divides his time in the two places. In some cases a member, in accordance with later information, is entered under a different place from the one given as his address in preceding pages. At the right of the name of each member is an abbreviation for the Chapter and Class of which he was a member. Where he was a member of two or more Chapters it is indicated. At the foot of every two pages will be found an explanation of the abbreviations alphabetically arranged, and also the pages where the biographical matter of each Chapter is given.
